ART SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.
ART UNION, 1884.
The Fifth Annual Exhibition of the above Society will open in the Town Hall on the 14th July next, and the usual ART UNION will be held in connection therewith.
The Picture to be presented this year to each Subscriber is an admirable reproduction, by the photo-gravure process, of Mr. G. R. Ashton's prize drawing, entitled "The Prodigal," specimen copies of which are now on view throughout the city.
It may be fairly stated that, apart from the other advantages to be derived from the Art UNION, this picture alone will be good value for the guinea expended; and the Committee confidently expect that its attractions will result in a large addition to the number of Art Union Subscribers, and thus enable a much greater amount than hitherto to be distributed in Prizes.
The Drawing will take place on SATURDAY, the 12th July.
Tickets, One Guinea each, which entitle the holder to One Chance in the distribution of Prizes, being Paintings, ranging in value from two to fifty guineas; one Copy of the abovenamed Picture, and admission to the Exhibition during its continuance, may be obtained from the Members of the Committee; Mr. Arthur Levy, 346, George-street; Mr. E. T. Carter, 320, George-street; Messrs. Nicholson and Co., George-street; Messrs. Crompton and Bruce, Pitt-street; Messrs. Turner and Henderson, Hunter-street. ART SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

ART UNION, 1884.

The Fifth Annual Exhibition of the above Society will open in the Town Hall on the 14th July next, and the usual ART UNION will be held in connection therewith.

The Picture to be presented this year to each Subscriber is an admirable reproduction, by the photo-gravure process, of Mr. G. R. Ashton's prize drawing, entitled "The Prodigal," specimen copies of which are now on view throughout the city.
It may be fairly stated that, apart from the other advantages to be derived from the ART UNION, this picture alone will be good value for the guinea expended; and the Committee confidently expect that its attractions will result in a large addition to the number of Art Union Subscribers, and thus enable a much greater amount than hitherto to be distributed in Prizes.

The Drawing will take place on SATURDAY, the 19th July.

Tickets, One Guinea each, which entitle the holder to One Chance in the distribution of Prizes, being Paintings, ranging in value from two to fifty guineas; one Copy of the abovenamed Picture, and admission to the Exhibition during its continuance, may be obtained from the Members of the Committee; Mr. Arthur Levy, 346, George-street; Mr. R. T. Carter, 379, George-street; Messrs. Nicholson and Co., George-street; Messrs. Crampton and Bruce, Pitt-street; Messrs. Turner and Henderson, Hunter-street.

This is the first of the many ... statues to be erected throughout Italy ... the hero that has yet been finished. And at the beginning of the month, the usual pil... procession with flags and banners, and the ... ation of the relics of martyrs, to the Janeculum ... commemoration of the defence of Rome against the ... French in 1849. This is always made a field-day of by the extreme Radical party, not because the remembrance thereof is ungrateful to Liberals of all shades, even those whose views are most opposed to the Radicals and Republicans, but for the reason that it was Mazzini and his colleagues, with Garibaldi for their chief military commander, who alone were connected with what occurred here at that time. I remind you of this because of the strange thing it is that the words procession, banners, relics, martyrs, and others connected with Roman Catholic Church commemorations, are always inseparable from the descriptions of the commemorations and other doings of those who are in every sense the Church's diametrically-opposed antagonists. On this last occasion the "relics"—i.e., the bones of two of those who fell somewhere outside the walls in defence of Rome in 1849, recovered not far short, it is now, of half a century later—were carried to the Janeculum, and deposited, with others previously laid there, with all the reverence in their authenticity the most devout Catholic could bestow on those of any saint. As to their authenticity, I must confess to little faith; but, authentic or not, they serve exactly the same purpose in stimulating the faith of believers in Republican institutions. The translation of Christian relics have been employed for by those the Republicans stigmatise as impostors. These strange similitudes in opposites might afford a theme for lengthy considerations I must leave to those curious in such matters.

But of the amusements the Italians and strangers have enjoyed this month, the Roman races stand in the first line, for they include the inauguration of the Italian Derby, or, as it is called here, Il Derby Reale—the Royal Derby. Now, this is no mere aping of England, or feeble copying of English tastes. It has at bottom a military rather than a sporting origin and purpose. Its object is to improve the breed of horses in Italy, and provide animals for the Italian cavalry. The originator may be said to have been no other than the great Italian statesman Count Cavour. Just before the war broke out between the Italians—or it would be more exact to say the Piedmontese, for Italy was then only a geographical term—aided by the French under Napoleon III., and Austria, one of the first things the Austrian Government did was to put a strict embargo on the exportation of horses from the Austro-Italian provinces into Piedmont, and Cavour was in no little difficulty how to mount his regiments, to say nothing of being prepared with remounts for them. The danger this might involve in the future was still further recognised as the unity of Italy approached completion, for the breeding of horses was almost non-existent in the country, and, with very few and most insufficient exceptions, those bred were of the poorest kind. Stimulated by Cavour, Victor Emmanuel turned his attention to remedying the want. Sires were bought in numbers and at great expense in England and France; stud farms were established at San Rossore and other of the Royal estates; breeding stations were also established by degrees in the different provinces: encouragement was given in every way, and King Humbert, energetically following his father's example, has continued the work, until finally, to stimulate still further the enterprise and arouse the interest of the Italian nobles and large landowners, and encourage the breeding of horses and the importation of thoroughbreds, he has instituted this Derby Reale, giving from his own purse an annual prize of 24,000 francs, to be run for by three-year-olds born and bred in Italy. For the first Derby Reale, which was run on the 24th of April, 11 of the 17 new-born foals and fillies, entered on the 30th of June, 1881, started, and they were almost all the offspring of famous English sires and dams imported, some of the dams being with foal at the time, birth only in Italy being requisite; but as time goes on it is hoped that the runners on the 24th will have descendants worthy of contending on the same course. But it must not be supposed that this Derby Reale marks also the introduction of horse-racing into Italy. That was done by Englishmen years ago, when carrying their manners and customs abroad they brought their hunters out to Rome with them for the season, and established the fox-hunt on the Roman Campagna. When there was a fair gathering of good horses they got up occasional steeplechases, and astonished the natives. Those were the days when the Pontifical Government exercised a paternal control over its subjects, and one year it having chanced that a young Italian who had gone out to see the meet broke his neck in a first attempt to jump a little ditch, his mother went to the Pope, Pius IX., who issued a prohibition against his subjects joining the hunt in future. The young man was in reality not hunting. In fact, he did not know how to ride, but, struck with emulation, or a desire to show off, he attempted to make a horse that could not jump take a small ditch; the beast got his fore feet into it, and rolling over awkwardly together the youth was killed.

But occasional steeplechases led to the English gentlemen in Rome establishing, in 1856, "The Grand Roman Steeplechase," to be run annually. This was the first regular race meeting known in Italy. Of course on each occasion there were such flat races as could be got up, and to make the day's sport as full as practicable there were races for Campagna horses; and very amusing they were, the legs and arms of their native riders going all the time like the sails of windmills. But the Grand Steeplechase also came under the ban of the Pontifical Government. Several of the younger members of the Roman aristocracy had joined the club, and particularly those with English blood in their veins, such as the young Dorias and Borgheses, whose mothers were daughters of the Earl of Shrewsbury. Among other horses entered to run in the year 1867, was Kettledrum, belonging to one of the Dorias. Mr. Spier, who rode him, wore, of course, the owners' colours, green jacket with red sleeves and cap, but unconscious altogether of the combination it would make, he buckled a broad white belt round his waist. No sooner did he appear on the course than the people recognised the Italian colours—red, white, and green—and applause was heard, which Spier took to the credit of the horse he sat; but when Kettledrum went in front and came in winner, the applause developed into a tremendous demonstration. It was not so much Kettledrum as the Italian colours that had won, and a serious question, threatening to become an international difficulty, arose. The Papal Government, insisting that Mr. Spier, who cared as little for Italian politics as Kettledrum himself, had been intent on furthering the interests of the revolution, ordered him to leave Rome at once. The interference, however, of the English Consul, and proper explanations, resulted in that order being withdrawn, but the steeplechase and races were stopped by Cardinal Antonelli until 1870, when Blazon was the winner. In 1882, for the first time after its institution, the steeplechase was won by an Italian-born horse, Diavoletto, belonging to Prince Borghese.

But in the meantime during these years the taste for racing and the love for horses, stimulated by the influence of the King and the Government for the purpose I have mentioned, increased steadily. Moreover, the deterrent power of a paternal Papal Government desirous of keeping its lay subjects in leading-strings ceased in 1870, and finally in 1881 an Italian Jockey Club, which now numbers 80 members, was established on principles founded exactly on the Newmarket rules. Under the auspices of this club race meetings have been initiated in the principal cities of the kingdom, and now there are every year at the prescribed dates races at Palermo, Naples, Rome, Florence, Bologna, Turin, and Milan. Rome is of course the headquarters of the club, and a couple of years ago it took the fields called the Capannelle, situated on the Campagna, about seven miles outside Rome, on a long lease, and laid out there a permanent course with three grand-stands, one for the members of the jockey club and other Italian racing clubs, one for gentlemen and ladies paying 20 francs each, and in the middle of these the Royal stand for the King and Queen and their suites; paddock, weighing-rooms, and all other requirements complete; and on the land adjoining the course a special training ground, with first-rate stables attached. English racing authorities say this is the finest course out of England, and better than some there. Of that I cannot judge, but certainly no course could be more beautifully or picturesquely situated. Midway between Rome and Albano, it is surrounded by a splendid panorama, as the Campagna stretches from it on all sides. The view is bounded in front of the stands by the Sabine Hills, with Tivoli, Monte Celli, and other towns basking in the sunlight on their slopes. On the plain below stretch the ruins of the Claudian Aqueduct. To the right are the Albano Hills, with Frascati, Rocca di Papa, Marino, Colonna, and other towns. In the distance on the left crouches Mount Soratte; further round on that side lies Rome, with the cupola of St. Peter's towering aloft. Behind is the open stretch of the Campagna, bounded by the sea, while on its level are scattered here and there, at distances apart, ruins of ancient Roman buildings and solitary mediaeval watch-towers. Not far from the course in the direction of Rome is the splendid villa of the Quintilii.

On such an occasion as the inauguration of the Derby Reale, and with such a prize to be run for as 24,000 francs, in a country where a quarter of that sum is considered a large amount, and especially for such a purpose, it followed, as a matter of course, that all the Roman world was there. King Humbert and Queen Margherita, with their suites, in the Royal stand, beautifully decorated with flowers; the Jockey Club stand crowded with members, who had come from all parts of Italy in numbers; and the public stand well filled with ladies and gentlemen. Unfortunately, however, the weather was unpropitious, dull and cloudy, with passing showers. That did much to diminish the brilliancy of the spectacle, the concourse of people, and the number of equipages, from what would otherwise have been the case; but, nevertheless, it was a most successful day, and a capital beginning. The racing, of which, however, I need scarcely give details, was excellent, and especially the Derby, which was won by Andreina, an exceedingly pretty mare, daughter of a famous English horse—Andred by Orphelina. The other ten who ran were as creditable a set of horses as one could desire to see, but in Andreina her owner has a prize. All she can do has yet to be ascertained for she has run this spring in six races and won them all. She made her debut at Palermo at the end of March. She won there, and at Naples on the 10th of April; on the 21th she won the Derby Reale, on the 26th another race on the second day over the same course, and 10 days later two other races at the Florence meeting, the total stakes of which forms a good round sum. I may add that for the races here the King, in addition to the 24,000 francs for the Derby, gave 6000 more for a Steeplechase, to be run by Italian horses, and the King's example was well followed, for 33,000 francs more was subscribed for the other prizes to be given during the two days, namely, 22,000 francs by the members of the Roman Racing Club, 3000 by the members of the Italian Jockey Club, 3000 by the Government, and 5000 by the municipality of Rome.

The bad weather, of which we have had an abundance this spring, that dimmed the brilliancy of the Derby Reale on the 24th, told with more serious effect against the opening of the Turin Exhibition on the 26th, for all the arrangements for the ceremony had been made in the open air, and in reliance on the balmy weather and clear blue sky of an Italian spring. A spacious dais, ornamented with flowers and covered overhead by a gay awning, had been arranged in front of the building, and there the Duke of Aosta as president of the Exhibition committee, Signor Villa, ex-Minister of Grace and Justice, as president of the Executive committee, and Signor Grimaldi, the new Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, read inaugural addresses in the presence of the King and Queen, the Duchess Dowager of Genoa (Queen Margherita's mother), the Duchess Amelia of Bavaria and her daughters, Prince Carignano, the Duke of Genoa, and all the foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, who have been invited to Turin for the occasion; everyone in the fullest of full dress and uniforms, with all the gold lace and decorations possible; while the rain here and there came filtering through the awning above. Nobody minded it, however, and that part of the ceremonial over, the rest was under cover. An inaugural hymn especially composed for the occasion was given in the Rotonda by a large number of vocal and instrumental performers, and then their Majesties, with all their brilliant following, went through the principal sections of the exhibition, stopping continually to express their admiration and ask questions regarding the objects shown.

As regards the exhibition itself, it is entirely for objects of national industry, enterprise, and produce, and is in every respect highly creditable. In many branches a very considerable advance is shown, and particularly in ceramics and in silk and velvet manufactures. The building, or rather buildings—for separate edifices have been erected for some of the sections, such as the fine arts, the machinery, and others—occupy an extensive area on a picturesque site above the left bank of the Po, and for this exhibition the municipality and citizens of Turin have subscribed 3,825,000.

On the day after the inauguration the new-born son of the Duke of Genoa was baptised with great state by Cardinal Alimonda, Archbishop of Turin, King Humbert standing godfather. The child received the names of Ferdinand Adalbert Humbert Maria. Cardinal Alimonda also paid a State visit to the King and Queen at the Royal Palace, and was received by both their Majesties with profound respect and cordiality. It is thus plain that the official excommunication which hangs over the King in Rome, is taken off everywhere else; and the Pope acknowledges the Savoy Monarchy in all other parts of Italy. The Royal Family are much discouraged at the failure of all efforts at reconciliation here with the Vatican, and it is much to be deplored that the Italian Government seems determined, by needless aggressions, to keep up the difficult situation. The funeral of Pius IX. in 1881 was one golden opportunity lost, and in that unfortunate mistake King Humbert was blameless, for he offered to guard the whole line of the procession, and even to follow the coffin himself, but his Prime Minister withheld approval. Then the sentence against the Propaganda struck at the spiritual power of the Pope; and it is now rumoured that the property of the holy house of Loreto will be the next object of attack. For this, the Radical papers are now agitating, scoffing at the legend of the miraculous translation of the House of Nazareth, and accusing the Pontiffs of encouraging a superstition in which they did not themselves believe. The Osservatore Romano replies to these attacks, and takes the opportunity of publishing the various decrees from Napoleon the First in 1808 down to Victor Emmanuel in 1861, by which the Holy House of Loreto was declared as specially placed under the protection of each revolutionary Government, and its patrimony exempted from absorption by the State. It is reported that the Pope, in his straitened circumstances, finds it will be impossible to continue giving free admission to visitors to the Vatican galleries, and that a fee will be levied in order to keep up the number of guards and custodians.

Reports of earthquakes in divers parts of Italy reach us daily. Here there have been none strong enough to attract attention. The summer heat is only just setting in, and according to the weather reports, the degree of heat in Rome has been lower than in any other Italian city. All the season sojourners are departing northwards, but the increased native population prevents much perceptible difference in the streets. The artists and jewellers complain that it has been a very bad season indeed for them, and there seems to be a general feeling of discouragement. Another sea-bathing resort, Porto d'Anzio, has been brought nearer Rome by the completion of the tramway from Albano. The scenery is pretty and the bathing good and safe. The old Neronian port is very interesting to archaeologists, with the vast chambers and remains of the old Imperial palace which run underground on the land side, and should excavations be commenced again on this site other discoveries worthy of the Apollo Belvidere that was ... lose on to 400 years ago may be made.

OUR BRISBANE LETTER.

BRISBANE, JUNE 27.

The Cabinet has at last cut the gordian knot which tightly held the Postmaster-General difficulty. It was a real difficulty, many-sided, requiring the calmest contemplation and the coolest judgment. Several names have been freely discussed both within and without political circles. To everyone there was some objection. The position will be a difficult one. The Postmaster-General will have to represent the Government in the Legislative Council. Mr. C. S. Mein, who represented the Douglas Ministry in that House, is still a member of it, and is far away the most competent and suitable man to represent the Griffith Government in that Chamber. But Mr. Mein fell into bad odour some time ago with the popular section of the Liberal party. He is a member of a firm of solicitors who do the legal business of the institutions with which the M'Ilwraith leaders are intimately connected; they are also solicitors to some members of the late Ministry; the relations are close, intimate, and confidential. It was feared that Mr. Mein was too much interested, professionally, with the party in opposition to join cordially in the counsels and measures of his old friends. Moreover, Mr. Mein piloted the M'Ilwraith defence through when the present Minister for Works sued Sir Thomas for damages for sitting and voting in Parliament whilst he was part owner of vessels sailing under contract with the Government. Whether or not the prejudice against him was narrow and unreasonable, it was not unnatural, and it has had to be respected to some extent. Hence the appointment, originally, of Mr. Garrick. Driven possibly by the exigency of the situation, the Ministry have gripped the difficulty. If they are cordially unanimous about it, it is more than was expected from them. The triumph is one deserving of commendation. No other appointment would have been half so suitable or efficient. There is much important business to be done. There will not be much difficulty, probably, in securing a good working majority in the Lower House; but a large majority of the cleverly-packed Upper House are quite out of sympathy with the Liberal party, and the policy of the coming legislation will affect some of them at their sorest points of self-interest. No man of the party in power, except Mr. Mein, would be likely to exercise the requisite tact and judgment to secure any chance in that Chamber for the acceptance of Government measures.

The Hon. J. F. Garrick has at last been able to proceed on his mission as Agent-General. He is followed by the good wishes of many friends here.

The junior Puisne Judge is most seriously unwell, and it is commonly doubted that he will be able to resume his judicial duties. Were he to become permanently incapacitated, it would not be easy to fill his place. We have a lot of young barristers here, but scarcely any who would command respect or confidence in such a position as that. Bearing the gravity, with the age, experience, and acumen, requisite to command respect, there are only two or three men in the colony. One of these has weightier matters on his hands, and prefers to lay down the foundations of a nation, or an important province of an empire, to laying down the nice points of law. He does the latter now, but not as Judge; he also does the former. Another eligible gentleman has gone home to represent the Government and the colony in the chief city of the empire. Were a vacancy to occur on the bench, the Government would still have another choice in the bar, and out of it they could find one or two very shrewd and clever lawyers.

Government is attempting to deal with the urgent wharfage question. It is intended to provide new wharf frontages to the Brisbane River, and lease them for 21 years. The leases will be submitted to competition at auction. Another scheme for wharfage accommodation has been mooted. It is to take in for that purpose a considerable length of the river frontage now belonging to the Botanic Gardens. The frontage is very little utilised at present. It is not even ornamented. It grows a few specimens of indigenous vegetation, which are nearly smothered by the almost omnipresent lantana bush. Commencing at the Edward-street entrance to the gardens, there are baths near the bank: then comes a space where a neighbouring iron firm has been allowed to finish one or two marine contracts after the launching process had taken place. Then there are moorings for sundry steamers of the tug species and a few flat-bottomed punts. The site is most central and accessible, approached easily from the level of Edward-street, and not more than five to ten minutes' distance from all the warehouses of the city. The principal objection to the proposal will be that it will cut a strip off the gardens. It will, however, be only a narrow strip, nearly all bank, now unused except as a napping ground for loafers, or a squatting ground for nursery maids. By taking in the broad walk between the grand row of bunya bunyas and the river width, enough could be obtained for wharfs, a tramway, and even bonded stores if required. Some day this scheme will be decided on; but I hope the delightful gardens will never be desecrated by any further commercial encroachments into them than be necessary.

There has been a considerable outcry amongst the sugar planters against a decision of the Colonial Secretary's to order back a shipload of black recruits. Of course, a decision of that sort means loss to somebody. It doubtless seems hardship enough to the owners of a vessel to reach port with a human cargo and not to be able to realise on them. But the hardship is doubled when those owners are compelled to take the cargo back to the place whence it was obtained, and disembark it without compensation. This was the position: The recruits were in such a condition of health that the medical inspector declared that to land them would be a cruelty, to work them in the canefields would be murder. The Colonial Secretary declined the responsibility of that species of murder, so he ordered the vessel to put about and return the recruits to their islands. These boys were recruited among the islands off the eastern coast of New Guinea. That has been a favourite recruiting ground for a year or two back. It was new ground, and the vessels reaped a large harvest. So did that other reaper—old, hoary, and voracious—who never cries "enough." In some cases the fatality amongst these boys from New Ireland, &c., has been terrible. They are physically unfit for the work for which they have been imported. Not one man in ten knew either where he was going or what was intended to be done with him. They were got on board somehow. Recent revelations concerning this traffic have been very humiliating to Queensland humanity. The civilised white trader has been teaching the noble savage some queer lessons in treachery and imposition. Nevertheless, we have outcries from interested quarters about the narrow-mindedness and sentimentalism of the Premier. He has no sympathy with sugar-planters, say these objectors; the fact being that he manifests some sympathy with the planters' labourers. I am satisfied Mr. Griffith is quite willing to let the sugar-planters have fair play with Polynesian labour if the procurers of that labour will practice fair play in their methods of recruiting. It is not fair to cajole those unsophisticated people on board labour vessels for the purpose of recruiting them by guile. It is not fair to force them into the boats when cajolery fails to entice them. If the craft of the planters be in danger they have to blame their providers of labour for that ominous state of things. The motto now is: "Correct the abuses, or crush the traffic."

There has been another outcry. Two men charged with kidnapping have passed through one or trials here, but as their alleged offence was committed within the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner for the Pacific that functionary claimed them. So the men were quietly taken one morning from the jail to H.M.S. Raven. They are only accused men. Whether guilty or not has yet to be proved. There was no need ... with indignity; there would have been ... ty in doing so. It was stated that they ... treated; but the statement was modified ... her information was supplied. Our police ... en with proper respect. What was done ... they had been taken over by the naval ... Queensland is not responsible for. It ... hat the Imperial treatment of alleged kid... a little less lenient and dainty than has been ... in this colony. These men are the captain and ... ernment agent of the late labour schooner ... vessel which passed through many phases ... ing business, in which she gained a fame that ... ways creditable. Once, when one of our local ... lished a little wholesome truth about the ... her timbers, a Maryborough gentleman ... a cry of indignation as to ... by for her owners. She perished nevertheless. Now, though the vessel has gone to pieces, the captain and even the Government agent are in durance vile on serious charges affecting the discharge of their recruiting functions.

The idol of aquatic athletes arrived here last night, and was made the most of by those who are that way inclined. We are not all that way inclined. When sport becomes trade, and enthusiasm runs wild, grave folk set up their backs, if they do not turn up their noses. Still, even in the matter of taste we must give and take. So the rowing fraternity are having their innings this week. The regatta in honour of Hanlan will come off to-morrow at Indooroopilly. It is rather too far away, but no doubt a crowd will gather, if it be only for the object of seeing the Canadian "wonder," and being able to say that they have seen him. We shall have a great holiday to-morrow. Last evening, whilst a biggish group of staring folk were looking up at the hotel windows behind which the idol was being worshipped by libations of champagne, a furious squall came suddenly over from the west. It depressed the spirits of aquatic sportists and of half the juveniles in Brisbane. It seemed to bode ill for the regatta, and for the great Sunday schools festival. The knowing ones marked the current of the wind and said, "It will be all right." This morning the sky is gloriously clear; a "westerly" is blowing, and the prospect of a fine day to-morrow is good. The young folk are in ecstacies of anticipation.

STEEL v. IRON SHIPS.

(From Mitchell's Register, May 16.)

A deputation presented itself at the Board of Trade on the 14th May for the purpose of laying before the President a memorial signed by shipbuilders, engineers, and others, urging him to give some additional facilities to the use of steel in place of iron in shipbuilding. Sir Thomas Farrer, in the absence of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who, he said, had been unexpectedly summoned to attend a cabinet council, received the deputation.

The memorial, which was presented by Mr. Arthur Albright, of Birmingham, set forth that science and experience had demonstrated that the loss of life and property at sea might be very much diminished by the use of steel instead of iron in the hulls and boilers of vessels. Lloyd's Shipping Register last year showed that the iron ships then existing numbered 7118, and the steel ships 266, yet no fewer than 980 iron ships were reported as lost or broken up in the five years ending 1883, and of steel vessels in the same period only two. The memorialists prayed, therefore, that the President would place steel on an impartial footing as compared with iron by making the present method of testing steel less costly, while effecting no diminution in its practical severity, and by directing the board in future to ensure that no brands of iron plates should be used in ships built in this country which should not have borne successfully tests of appropriate severity. It was further urged that in the case of steel marine boilers the board should allow a reduction in weight of steel fully adequate to its superiority over iron, especially in the case of triple expansion engines.

Mr. G. J. Snelus showed some specimens of steel plates which had been doubled over while cold without injury to them. Not one of the iron plates used in shipbuilding would, he said, bend to a right angle. Ship iron was the very worst and cheapest iron made. What they complained of was the want of uniformity to the tests, as a different standard was adopted by Lloyd's, the Liverpool Underwriters, the Bureau Veritas, and (for boilers) the Board of Trade. At present no steel for shipbuilding came from other countries; but he was afraid that unless some alteration was made in this respect the trade would in the end be driven out of Great Britain. The difference in the cost of iron and steel was about £2 per ton, iron being worth at the shipbuilders' yard about £5 10s. a ton, and steel £7 10s. The difference was partly due to the tests for steel, which in some cases caused an additional charge of 5s. a ton.

In answer to inquiries, Sir Thomas Farrer was informed that steel was superior for endurance and safety, while, as the plates were thinner than iron plates, there was a larger stowage capacity for cargo, estimated at no less than 17 per cent. This being so, he wanted to be informed why it was comparatively little used by shipowners, who were not suspected of being averse to their own interests.

Mr. Snelus thought that they would have to be educated up to steel vessels as the railway companies had been educated up to steel rails.

Mr. H. Smith suggested that the question of insurance was at the bottom of the matter, as shipowners preferred the total loss of an iron ship to getting a steel ship twisted and strained, and thus incurring heavy expenses for repairs.

Sir Thomas Farrer promised to lay the memorial before Mr. Chamberlain. He pointed out, however, that the Board of Trade had power by Act of Parliament to examine only the boilers of ships, and not the hulls. It would be a serious undertaking for the Board of Trade to test ships. The Board of Trade had shown no preference for iron, but, on the contrary, their action had been favourable to steel. As regarded boilers, he thought that the demand for a uniformity of test was a reasonable one, but whether they could carry it into effect would depend upon the co-operation of various other people, including the authorities of Lloyd's.

The deputation then thanked Sir Thomas Farrer and withdrew.

THE CONGO.

The Times understands that the following are the terms of the arrangement which has been concluded between the Government of the French Republic and the Association Internationale du Congo:—France pledges herself to respect the stations and the free territories of the Association, as also to recognise the exercise by the Association to the rights which it has acquired. The Association undertakes not to dispose of its possessions, but in the event of circumstances compelling their abandonment, the option of purchasing is reserved in the first instance to the French Government. The agreement whereby the United States Government recognises the flag of the Association internationale already provides that no customs duties are to be levied on goods imported into the territories of the Association, and that equal rights as regards residence, dealings in land, and general trading privileges, are to be accorded to the citizens of every nationality.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times writes on May 21:—"At a general meeting here this evening of the German Society for Promoting Colonisation, an address was delivered by Consul Annecke on 'The Importance of the Congo territories for German interests,' &c. After describing the climatic and other phenomena of the Congo region the speaker passed on to descant on its political and international status, taking occasion to indulge in a bitter diatribe against the Imperial policy of England. The Congo Treaty between Great Britain and Portugal, he argued, was in reality a blow directed by England more against Germany than against France, seeing that the Germans had business qualities which aroused the 'base shopkeeping jealousy' of the English; while the French, not being by nature good colonists or organisers, could never become their dangerous competitors. For this reason it was more in the interest of England to exclude the Germans than to exclude the French from Africa. The meeting passed a vote of thanks to Prince Bismarck for his having protested against the terms of the Congo Treaty—an act of the Chancellor, by-the-bye, which has, indeed, been most warmly commended by the German press of all shades. But this 'German Society for Promoting Colonisation' has not got beyond, and is not likely to get beyond, the academic stage, though it is doubtless the outcome of a movement which is most decidedly one of the signs of the times in Germany."

The Political Correspondence of Vienna is informed from Brussels that the International African Association has already established regular relations with France and the United States, and that it is expected soon to come to a friendly understanding with Germany. It is intended to proceed at once with the organisation on the Congo of an independent State, in which all Europe must needs be interested.

THE MONETARY PANIC IN NEW YORK.—The Philadelphia correspondent of the Times writes on May 20:—"The New York banks, which had curtailed their system of loans, lent more freely to-day, obtaining good rates. A list of the failures in New York since the crisis began has been published. It includes 12 firms, with an estimated capital of 4,720,000 dollars and a liability of 32,000,000 dollars. The Tura Valley National Bank, Bradford, Pennsylvania, and the Union Bank of Quincy, Illinois, have suspended payment. Various savings banks of New York, Brooklyn, and the neighbouring towns encountered runs; but all met them except the New York and New Jersey Savings Bank, which closed its doors today. The New York Clearing House furnished assistance to six banks, issuing for the purpose about 5,000,000 dollars worth of certificates. It expects to issue 10,000,000 dollars worth to-day. The belief is generally expressed that the danger of the occurrence of any bank panic is past. Messrs. Fisk and Hatch have attributed their suspension to a decline in United States bonds, of which they carried 15,000,000 dollars worth, being unable to relieve themselves of the pressure when heavy demands came from their depositors. The fear that these bonds would come on the market tended to depress prices. Petroleum prices declined sharply; this decline partly causing the suspension of the Bradford Bank. The Standard Oil Company, which practically controls the trade, came to the rescue of the operators, advancing aid to the oil banks in the West and to the oil brokers in New York, thus enabling them to carry the momentary load. Mr. Russell Sage caused some excitement among the stock gamblers by his slow movements in meeting contracts on 'puts,' 'calls,' and 'upreads,' payment being demanded for large amounts by shouting crowds gathered round his office. Mr. Sage, who is the only extensive dealer in these commodities since Mr. Keene's failure, states that he has disbursed in meeting them since the panic began over 2,000,000 dollars. Mr. John James, banker, of Atlanta, Georgia, suspended business, and two small New York stock houses also suspended. The excitement was less than was witnessed yesterday on the Stock Exchange, the belief being that the leading 'bears' have covered their 'shorts.' One seat on the New York Stock Exchange has been sold for 20,000 dollars, the lowest price obtained for years past."

ILLEGITIMATE BANKING.

(From the Spectator, May 10.)

The cause of the failure of the Oriental Bank is not a mystery. The Times speaks of an unsuccessful speculation in Chilian bonds, and of another in silver, based upon the idea that bimetallism would ultimately prevail; but though we may wonder at transactions so foolish, we do not understand that these losses were irremediable, or indeed exceeded the bank's accumulated reserve. The bank has fallen through the temptation which besets every Joint Stock Bank, and is especially attractive to banks doing business principally in Asia—the temptation to earn large dividends easily by lending borrowed money on dangerous securities. A bank with its head office in London and its business in Asia almost invariably runs through a certain foreordained course. It begins with an exchange business, which, if its managers know their work, is quite safe, fairly profitable, and exceedingly monotonous,—the sort of business out of which a private banker, with a quarter of a million of his own and half a million of deposits, might easily extract a safe 15 per cent. It next, as deposits flow in, lends money, like an English bank, on securities usually good, but, whether good or bad, certainly realisable after a fixed date. This also is profitable, for the risk is small and much distributed; and while the money is borrowed at the comparatively low English rates, it is lent at the comparatively high rates which constantly or intermittently prevail in Asia. A few days ago, for example, the Bank of Bengal was charging 11 per cent. for discounts, and of course if it could do this with money borrowed at 5 per cent.—which is not the system of that particular bank—the temporary profit would be large. By-and-bye, however, the bank managers find that deposits are still rolling in, that they cannot lower their rate of interest, that the exchange business is "spoiled" by competition and the use of the electric telegraph, that the discount business offering is not sufficient, and that a new outlet for the employment of their money must be discovered; too much borrowed capital otherwise lying idle at 5 per cent. Then they turn to investment in the most attractive, and, for a bank, the most dangerous of all possible securities, the "estates" owned by Europeans in India or the tropical colonies. The owners of these "estates" are always wanting money. They are, for the work to be done, the most impecunious class in the world, and for a very obvious reason. When a planter has made money, he goes "home" to spend it, leaving his successor, be it partner, agent, or assignee, to meet all requirements for wages, new machinery, and cultivation the best way he can, that is, in fact, by borrowing. The new "estate" owners, therefore, apply to the banks; they offer high interest, often 16 per cent.; and they pledge securities which, on paper, look quite perfect. There is the "estate," valued according to its price in a good year; there are the crops; and there is the produce from those crops—coffee, quinine, sugar, rum, or what not. What could be better? To borrow money at 5 per cent., and lend it to men on the "mortgage" of such "estates," say, at 12 per cent., must, as it seems to Englishmen, be profitable business. So it is in good years, though it is bad banking; but bad years come, and then the bankers find that their shareholders have divided past banking profits, that their debtors have spent their own past profits from sales of produce, and that the securities in their hands are not "estates" at all in the English sense, but unprofitable businesses, which it is ruinous to stop, because nobody will just then buy the factories, and most dangerous, in the teeth probably of falling prices, to carry off by further advances. Still, they do carry them on. A private banker may make a heavy loss, and if not ruined grin and bear it, for nobody knows his blunders; but Joint Stock Bank directors have to explain losses, to endure cross-examination, to listen to insults, and their moral nerve fails. If they told the truth they would have to resign, as confessed failures; and they will not do it. They "carry" the planters, that is, they turn planters on a huge scale themselves; and as planting is a business almost dependent for success upon the personal ability of the planter to govern great crowds of labourers, artisans, and overseers, all intent on doing as little as possible, they usually lose money. The depression continues, the losses become visible to all men with eyes, and then the bankers become exposed to a double danger. They are losing heavily for a time on their "estates;" and the inflow of cheap money from depositors, which is their only advantage over other planters, and their only chance of tiding over the dangerous time, stops. "Notices of withdrawal" rain in, and though the contracts provide for a year's delay, the money might as well be withdrawn at once. It has not been lent out upon six months' bills, but on trading concerns from which it might take ten years, and is sure to take three years, to escape without loss. There is nothing for it, even if there are gleams of light ahead, but to stop; for otherwise, while the frightened depositors who are injuring the bank will be paid in full, the unfrightened depositors who are supporting the bank to the end will have to bear the whole loss. The bank stops, and there is misery in thousands of quiet households, whose heads can urge at least one plea on their own behalf,—they were not moved to invest in the bank shares by any unconscionable greed. Nothing in the history of Oriental banking is as strange as the moderation of the profits with which investors are content. So long as the dividend is not below five per cent. on the purchase-money, they will accept what is for many of them unlimited risk—that is, a risk of being called upon for all their savings—without even a passing apprehension.

There is, so far as we know, no remedy whatever except for shareholders to forbid absolutely the lending of money upon any security not realisable within the year; and that limits "business" excessively. It involves, to use English law terms, peremptory foreclosure whenever the planter cannot pay his debt out of one year's crop; and planters, of course, shrink from banks which enforce such a rule. It is, however, if we are not misinformed, a nearly inflexible rule with the French Colonial banks, which are semi-State affairs, and is the cause of the steady prosperity of those institutions. It is, at all events, the one rule compatible with permanent safety in that kind of business. No method of management will make banking agents abroad willing to acknowledge and write off great losses; and no care will prevent loans on estates in the tropics from involving the liability to work those estates, which is not what banks are made for. The "estates" are, in fact, businesses, and risky businesses; and the bank which lends money on them is sure, sooner or later, to find itself with a gigantic planting business on its hands, far too big to manage properly, and taken up just when falling prices have compelled the planters to give up the hope of profit, and allow foreclosure.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

The following important communication with reference to the French occupation of Tonquin is from the Paris correspondent of the Times:—

"According to information which I have reason to believe accurate, the organisation which the French Government intends to give to its Indo-Chinese possessions, as extended by the treaty of Tientsin, will be as follows: In the first place it has been admitted that for a long time to come the different provinces now composing French Indo-China must be left in their present state of relative autonomy, and that attempt at unification, which, as everybody knows, France is prone to proceed to in the organisation and administration of new possessions, would be fraught with difficulties, as has been seen from slight experiments already made in these parts, and indeed from all attempts at unification made of late years. Thus, the Government has come to the conclusion that, while instituting political and higher administrative uniformity, the provinces now composing Indo-China should be allowed to retain their present administrative and commercial individuality. Hence, a Governor-General of Indo-China would be appointed, with sub-governors or provincial governors, who, while exerting independent action, would be, as regards general administration and political action, subject to the authority of the Governor-General. Thus, there would be provincial governors in Cochin China and Tonquin, and Ministers Resident in Cambodia and Laos, where France exercises a kind of protectorate. The Governor-General of French Indo-China would reside at Hué, where he would be at the same time Minister-Resident for Annam. The seat of general government would be established there; first, because the Sovereign of Annam resides there; and, secondly, because Annam being an unproductive province, which cannot be turned to any profitable account, the duties of Minister-Resident would be light, thus permitting the Governor-General to carry on, without distraction, the general political and administrative direction of Indo-China. The provincial governors do not seem as yet to have been fixed upon, but as Governor-General M. le Mire de Villiers, formerly Governor of Indo-China, seems to have been chosen. He has had great practical experience of these countries, and his special capacities and former functions seem to mark him out specially for the post. A special governor will be appointed for the frontier separating Tonquin from China, in order to govern them in a special spirit and to reduce to a settled condition. This is a part of the new conquest, which for a long time to come will not be perfectly quiet and submissive to its new masters. It is thought that this, as it were, military frontier will be placed under the government of a general, or a least of a military governor. As regards the revenues of the new provinces it is well known that for some years back French Indo-China has yielded a surplus of revenue over expenditure amounting at present to about 4,000,000 francs. It is thought that Tonquin, besides commercial advantages, may easily yield a revenue of from 10,000,000 francs to 12,000,000 francs per annum. This revenue would enable France to place the provincial governors in a position, in point of salary, which would permit them to keep up their rank, and raise the prestige of France to a point which would speedily make it popular among the still hesitating or hostile populations of a freshly conquered country.

The French newspapers are vying with each other in anxiety to have French trade protected in Tonquin. According to the National, the Government has at present under consideration the tariff to be applied in the new French possession—a tariff which will be a very different one, it says, from those at present existing in the chief French colonies. The Government is going to impose differential duties in favour of French manufactures, "so as to prevent their being speedily excluded from the new markets opened up for them by French arms. It is almost certain that foreign imports into Tonquin will be subjected to differential duties of at least 25 per cent. This will be an important advantage for Frenchmen, and will be a kind of compensation for the war indemnity which France has renounced." The National ingeniously suggests that tonnage duties should be levied on foreign vessels for the encouragement of French merchant shipping, since otherwise all the trade will be done in English and German bottoms.

FRENCH FEMALE CONVICTS AT SANDRIDGE.

(From the Argus, June 27.)

At the end of January last the French transport frigate Nantes sailed from Bordeaux, bound for Noumea, with some 150 passengers on board. A number of these were reported to be women, selected from the prisons of France, sent out as mates for the libérés of New Caledonia. The Nantes lost her rudder and otherwise came to grief off the Cape of Good Hope, and had to put in to Cape Town. The passengers were landed on the quarantine station at Robin Island, in Table Bay, where they remained for nearly two months, when they re-embarked on 16th May on board the Dupuy de Lôme, which left Bordeaux the 20th April, specially chartered to call at Cape Town and convey them to their destination. Considerable excitement was caused in the city last night when it became known that the Dupuy de Lome had not only entered the bay, but was moored alongside Sandridge pier. This was done shortly after 4 o'clock. Police-constable O'Donnell, who was on duty on the pier, reported the matter to headquarters, and in a short time a body of constables were sent down to Sandridge under the command of Inspector Toohey. Later on Superintendent Sadleir, Sub-inspector Brown, and detective Coleman appeared on the scene. During the bustle of landing a number of women, dressed in the ordinary garb of French peasants, were observed on deck. These were reported to be the female convicts, and considerable surprise was manifested that they were allowed so much liberty and permitted to descend the gangway and promenade on the pier. But Captain A. Coup, an officer of the French navy, who is in command, soon undeceived the police officials. He informed them that the convicts were always carefully confined in their quarters aft, only being allowed on deck one hour during the day for exercise. To prove the security of the precautions taken, he conducted Superintendent Sadleir and company through the convict quarters. These are in the aft bulk-head, between decks occupying the whole width of the vessel. At the companion way aft there is a door, which is always locked and bolted. A surveillant is on guard here night and day. The sentry is relieved every three hours. There are six of these officials in charge of the convict women, besides four Sisters of the Order of St. Joseph of Cluny. The women are sent to rest at 8 o'clock every evening, and were all in bed when Captain Coup took his visitors below. The berths are in three tiers, fixed much the same as in an ordinary immigrant ship. The first impression was surprise at the cleanliness and good ventilation from the upper deck. There are small port-holes at the sides, but these have been strictly closed since the time the vessel entered the bay. Under the dim light of a lantern it was not possible to see much of these women, but they appeared to be generally hard-featured, of the ordinary French type. Their ages varied from 19 to 50, and they all seemed particularly strong and able-bodied. The elder women, we were informed, are the wives of criminals in New Caledonia going out to join their husbands. Amongst the married women there are five little children. But the majority are young robust women, who have been selected for their good conduct and physique as partners for the libérés and convicts at the penal settlements of Bourail and Teremba. The surveillant informed us that they are a "scratch lot"—criminals convicted of every crime, including many murderers, who had taken the lives of their husbands and lovers, for which offences verdicts were recorded with "extenuating circumstances."

We are informed that the discipline on the Dupuy de Lome is very strict. They rise before daylight, and clean and scrub, and have long prayers, and are exhorted to follow the paths of temperance and virtue, and exhibit all the Christian charities, by the good Sisters. As to whether the women who stupidly stared at the visitors, some hastily huddling on their clothes of coarse linsey, have profited much by the advice on the voyage is an open question. The surveillant informed us that they were all "bad enough," and displayed a considerable amount of evil temper. But amongst 54 women cooped up together for 23 hours out of the 24, there is a possibility of envy, hatred, and malice arising. The Sisters appear to have a due authority over their charges. One of these sleeps in a room off a passage at the end of the steerage. She alone possesses the key which opens the doors communicating with the convicts' quarters, and on the other side with the passage, where another surveillant is always on duty, being locked in. With male guards outside, and nuns inside, these female criminals are completely isolated from the other part of the ship or communication with the rest of the passengers. The key of the companion-way is in the charge of the officer of the watch, and the Superior of the Sisters has a duplicate. The 100 free passengers bound for New Caledonia are mostly minor officials, and the wives and families of gendarmes and surveillants, who are very much discontented with their five months' voyage. Captain Coup thoroughly satisfied Superintendent Sadleir that every precaution was taken to prevent any escape of the female prisoners. They cannot communicate with the shore as it is said that they will not be allowed on deck during the time the vessel is alongside the pier. Detective Coleman, who is in charge of Port Melbourne, was, however, left on board the Dupuy de Lome all night with three constables. On his return to Melbourne Superintendent Sadleir sent a further detachment of plain-clothes men to promenade the pier, and a body of police were kept in readiness at headquarters.

EARL ROSEBERY ON THE RECIDIVISTE QUESTION.

In the House of Lords, on May 19, the Earl of Rosebery, who had a notice on the paper to call attention to the proposed deportation of recidivistes from France to the Western Pacific, and to move a resolution, said:—It is an open secret that I am about to postpone my motion, and I have only kept it on the paper that I might offer a few words of explanation. I have postponed it a second time, acting on the best advice that I can obtain, because it is said that a discussion might cause a false impression in France, where it is most desirable to avoid misunderstanding. And it would be affectation to deny that among the opponents of this bill in France it is felt that such a discussion might do harm, and resemble an attempt to interfere in her domestic concerns. I need hardly say that no idea of the sort has crossed my mind. But what is felt in France is this—that there is a wish in Great Britain to prevent her establishing a convict depot on her own territory. I disclaim any such idea. It never occurred to me to protest against the erection or constitution of a prison by the French Government in French territory. Our apprehensions are widely different. We deprecate a proposal to place the worst characters in France at liberty on a small island within an easy sail from some of our noblest and most attractive colonies, to which these criminals must, in the nature of things, make their way with all convenient speed. There is a great difference between the two propositions. Let me illustrate it by a familiar analogy. Suppose one was in lodgings and the lodger on the next floor takes lessons on the flute; we may suffer, but we have no right to complain. But if, on the other hand, he has a nest of favourite snakes at liberty in his room, as some eminent naturalists have, I think one has a right to say that he is not acting in a very neighbourly manner. And so it is with New Caledonia. It is not precisely the neighbour that one could choose; criminals escape constantly and land on Australian shores, and expirees also. But so long as due diligence is observed in endeavouring to guard them there is nothing to be said. On the other hand, a proposal to turn the crime of a great nation loose and free on New Caledonia, with an occasional leave on parole of six months, may well cause some concern among the neighbours of New Caledonia. But there is another point on which I wish to offer a word of explanation. I am deeply impressed with the Australian feeling on this subject. I think it is both justifiable and dangerous. But I certainly do not wish to hold out Australian feeling on this subject as any matter for the consideration of France. If the bill passes, her trade with and through Australia will probably suffer, if not cease, from restrictive measures. That is a comparatively small matter to a great nation like France. But I do hold out Australian sentiment on these points as a great danger for this country. If the bill passes, Australia, as two statesmen so cautious as M. Barthélemy St. Hilaire and the Secretary of State for the Colonies have admitted, must pass measures to protect herself. There is such a measure already, which only needs the addition of a few words to render it applicable. I do not presume that the Imperial Government would veto the addition of those words. If it allows them, there is an almost unavoidable risk of collision or ill-feeling in the penalties they impose on captains, knowingly or unknowingly bringing convicts or expirees to the colony. If it does veto them, such a veto would provoke a feeling in Australia as regards the Imperial Government of which I for one decline to calculate the consequences. I do not doubt that her Majesty's Government are fully alive to all this, and have laboured assiduously in the matter. But I thought it advisable in postponing the motion to say at least this much to show our fellow-subjects in Australia that even in postponing the discussion we are mindful of their interests. (Hear, hear.) The motion was accordingly postponed.

ANOTHER THEATRE BURNED DOWN IN VIENNA.—The Vienna Stadt Theatre has been burnt down. It was built in 1872 by a joint-stock company, and was intended to rival the famous Hofburg Theatre. The piece to be given was Anzengruber's "Meineidbauer," but at the time the flames broke out neither the company nor the public had begun to arrive. The fire was first discovered in a box on the third tier by some of the servants of the theatre, who succeeded in making their escape and giving the alarm. The whole building was soon in flames. The members of the fire brigade had the greatest difficulty in reaching the building with their engines, and when they did the fire had gained such a complete hold on the theatre that their efforts were practically confined to saving the inhabited dwellings at the back. The heavy gas lustre came down soon after the fire broke out, and soon afterwards the roof fell in. At this moment the scene was terrible, the flames shooting high up into the sky, carrying with them blazing scantlings, some of which fell at a considerable distance. This is the sixth theatre that has been burnt in Vienna since 1761. Eleven persons were more or less severely injured during the fire. The performers engaged at the theatre have been informed by the director, Herr Bukovics, that he will temporarily support all who require assistance. The building and the stage properties were insured for 360,000fl.

THROUGH DIVINE PROVIDENCE.—Rev. Dr. ——, in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, who was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent (blood purifier) internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures) externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out of his system. Every form of pyaemia or blood poisoning is speedily cured by the Cuticura Remedies.—[ADVT.]

A JOURNEY THROUGH JAVA.

By the Rev. J. E. Tenison-Woods, F.G.S., F.L.S., &c.

XV.

Djohiakarta has many other objects of interest besides its Wyonge and Gamelangs. There are magnificent ruins of an ancient palace just outside the walls of the town. It was quite by accident I heard of them. Strange to say, they are not mentioned by Sir Stanford Raffles, or by Crawford. The latter was Government Resident at the Sultan's Court during the year 1816, and has written much about the city, but says nothing about the ruins. Photographers who have been everywhere, and taken views of almost everything, seems also to have passed these over.

They are, I think, about a mile outside the town. First one comes to the remains of ancient walls of brick and plaster, standing amidst a dense growth of fig trees, ferns, and jungle. Suddenly one notices amidst them a massive stone gateway, with minarets at each side. The gate is entered by a long low archway, so low indeed that a man of middle height must stoop as he walks. The arch opens twice into small chambers. At the further side is a spacious court, which is said to be full of water except in the dry season. It was a square bath or reservoir of some sort, for it is walled all round, and there are steps in many places leading down to the basin. It was quite dry just then, and the floor was covered with cracked flakes of mud. It had not rained in this part of Java for more than three months, and everything was parched.

There was a broad margin or walk round this bath, flanked by high walls. The further end had a very high wall, with pillars at each side, and a staircase at one side to the summit of a kind of stone platform. All the stones around were carved and ornamented, but not in a very elaborate manner. It seemed as if there had been some large pavilion here. Beyond this there were heaps of stone and rubbish, with porticos, arches, and remains of passages. With a little care one could easily obtain an idea of the plan of the building, for the ruins have been disturbed but little. We had guides with us who had met us at the gates, and volunteered to show us what there was to be seen. They appeared to know the building very well, and explained the uses and names of each portion of it. But the great object of their solicitude at first was, that we should not be bitten with leg-snakes. They said that the ruins were full of them. At every tangled mass of stones, brushwood, ferns, and creeping plants that we had to pass, they went before us beating the shrubs. But they themselves were barefooted, and quite careless where they put their feet, so that the danger after all could not be so very great. I should say that scorpions were far more numerous amongst these piles of stones.

Beyond the bath the next recognisable structure was an enclosure which had been a reservoir, or ornamental water. It was square, and included some five or six acres. An embankment of solid masonry went all round, with broad flights of steps at intervals, intended as places of embarkation. The guides told us that in former times the Sultans had this for pleasure-boats. There used to be upon its waters boat races, both for sailing and rowing. I don't know where they got their information, but such traditions doubtless have some foundation in fact. There was not a drop of water in the place then. The bottom was covered with grass and shrubs. The water lies on the ground to some extent in the rainy season, but never fills up the reservoir to its former grandeur.

There is a rising ground on one side forming a rather steep slope, now covered with crumbling masonry and young trees. Evidently this was a terrace which, by flights of steps, led up to the kraton, or palace. It is still standing, and forms an imposing line of buildings two stories high. The roof is a series of arches of brickwork, and the walls are of considerable thickness. Entering the doorway, we found ourselves in a long corridor of great height. There had been a floor between the basement and the roof, as the marks could be seen in the walls, but it had all fallen away. Various rooms, with crumbling doorways and windows, indicated a large number of not very spacious apartments. I should like to have explored them all, but but the guides pointed to the ground strewn with the stones which had fallen down to show how dangerous it was to go much amongst these tottering stones. Quite recently a large mass of masonry had fallen from the roof, and many stones were hanging in such a way as to need little more than a breath of air to make them fall.

The guides led us along a circular passage with windows like embrasures, to what must have been a well. It was a very large one, if so. The passage we were in led to an opening and a flight of steps curving round a wall of masonry some 40 feet in width, and open to the sky. About 20 feet down two thick stone arches crossed each other at right angles, and at the base of the arch a stone platform, with a low circular wall in the centre, surrounded the well. There was a good depth of water; which was said to be wonderfully clear and cool. A passage led away from the corridor above this to a large stone tank where, it is said, fishes were reared. The covered way leading to this was a very solid building. The stone was in large blocks mortised into one another, and smoothed with much care. The light was too imperfect to see the construction of the arches. They were pointed in the middle, and more like Gothic than Hindu. The well reminded me very much of a part of the Alhamba; but on the whole the Hindu character of the architecture prevailed. The difference between this building and the style of the temples at Bramhanan or elsewhere, was very marked. There was nothing like the attempts at elaborate ornament which are found in those ruins. In fact the palace of Djohiakarta and its surroundings, however extensive and solid, was a plain building with very little stone carving about it.

The Javanese of the present day have no architecture. Whatever skill they formerly possessed in sculpture—and it was great—utterly died out with the advent of the Mahometan religion. All the glories of Java in arts and sciences belong to the old Hindu times. In the case of the arts we can understand this. The religion of Islam forbids the portraying of any living thing in sculpture or painting. To this day one could not offer a greater insult to a Malay than to offer him a portrait. I remember once giving some sweetmeats to a child in Larut. They were contained in a box on which there was a picture of some children playing. The child's father, a Malay chief, handed the box back to me. He seemed a little annoyed, but politely informed me that his religion did not countenance such pictures. They were an abomination.

Yet my readers will say, how is it that the Javanese permit the Wyonge, or shadow plays, in which the drama is carried on by painted figures. Well, this shows that the Islamism of the people is not very strict. But if you ask the islanders why they permit these plays when they are so contrary to the principles of their religion, they will tell you the following story:—"When the Mahometan religion took possession of the people, the Hadjis thought to stop the drama. But the Emperor of that time loved these scenic representations dearly, and he would not give them up. So he ordered them to be altered into the distorted figures which we now see. 'By these means,' said the Emperor, 'while the world will not imagine the figures to be human, the Javans, from recollecting their history, will yet be able to comprehend the characters they are intended to represent, and enjoy in secret their national amusements; or if in time they should forget the originals or confound them with the distorted resemblances, they will be impressed with the idea that it was only after our conversion to the religion of the prophet that their ancestors assumed the present form of man.'"

However ingenious this explanation is, it does not meet the facts of the case. Similar figures are found on the more ancient coins. It was evidently the style of art in Hindu times, long before the building of the temples. They are found also in the Hindu island of Bali; they are very like some of the Japanese figures, and still more like, as I have pointed out, the Aztus of America. Most probably some common origin connects them all.

To return to the palace. I don't think that these ruins are very ancient. If they date back to the 15th century it is the very outside. Still, this is only my opinion, and derived from the evidence there is of Mahometan influence. They show great wealth and luxury amongst the princes of old times. What scenes of cruelty and despotism have not these walls witnessed! Quite as much, probably, as any European palace or castle of about the same period. Yet we could not then manage things as the Javanese did. With them survived the old Roman gladiatorial shows and fights with wild beasts, as the following anecdote will show:—In the days of Amang Kubuana, the fourth of Djokiakarta, and somewhere about A.D. 1806, two men were brought before the Sultan for having set fire to a dwelling. The evidence was not very clear, so his Highness bethought him of a way to meet the ends of justice, and provide him with amusement. The accused should assert their innocence by the ordeal of battle, and their enemies should be wild beasts. But a sharp kris would not leave a sufficient margin for the force of their innocence to assert itself. They were given blunted ones, therefore, and turned in succession into a large tiger cage. The first victim made but a poor fight, and was soon torn to pieces. He was regarded as guilty. The second allowed the tiger to get his claws entangled in his sarong, while he, with great swiftness, stabbed the creature in both eyes. Then, as the kris was very blunt, a long struggle ensued, which resulted in a victory for the man. The Sultan did not consider this a fair test of innocence, so a leopard was let in upon the victim. The man was again victorious, and was released. Such things must have been very rare. The very fact that it is so well remembered and quoted with horror as an example of the Sultan's tyranny and cruelty shows that it was exceptional.

Somehow I don't think that this palace of Djohiakarta was ever a residence of the Sultan's. The many baths, fish ponds, reservoirs, and wells incline me to believe it was a place of bathing and amusement. There are such places actually in existence. The seat of government of the old emperors was at Mataram from 1540 to 1600, and probably this establishment was connected with their residence in the old city.

In front of the present kraton there is a fine arena, or Alun-alun, with splendid pairs of Warignen all round. In this open space, as I have already stated, reviews, inspections of troops, and the public sports take place. They have bull fights in which the bulls are trained to fight with each other, and not with dogs or men. These are very popular exhibitions. Great crowds of spectators flock to the Alun-alun to witness this kind of sport. They have also a popular amusement consisting of a fight between a ram and a wild boar. A small stand is raised for the ram, to which he can retreat when in danger, and whence he makes frequent charges on his enemy. Sir Stamford Raffles says that the end of the fight is generally that a number of dogs are let loose upon the boar.

Tournaments are also exhibited in the Alun-alun, especially on the day on which the Sultan appears in public. This he does by mounting a richly caparisoned horse and riding round the Warignen trees. While this takes place the chiefs, and particularly their sons and youthful relations, join in pairs, tilting and striking their long and blunted spears as they pass the Sultan. This is Sir Stamford Raffles' account, as I never witnessed it. They try to unhorse each other, but seldom succeed. Afterwards there are sham fights on foot with spear and shield.

It may be here interesting to add a few particulars which I have been enabled to glean concerning the music and drama of the Javanese for which Djohiakarta is so famous. Both Raffles and Crawfurd made great extensive researches as to the music, and in Raffles' History (1st edit. plates) there are the scores of some of the most popular melodies. These, with the instruments, were submitted to the celebrated Dr. Crotch. He writes with reference to them:—"A pair of gongs was suspended in the centre of a most superb wooden stand, richly carved, painted, and gilt. The tone of these instruments exceeded in depth and quality anything I had ever heard. Another instrument, consisting of a double series of small gongs had a tone at once powerful and sweet, and its intonation clear and perfect. I was astonished and delighted at the ingenious fabrication of the instruments of percussion generally; their splendour, beauty, and accurate intonation."

With reference to their system of music, he says:—"The instruments are all in the same kind of scale as that produced by the black keys of the pianoforte, in which scale so many of the Scotch, Irish, all the Chinese, and some of the best Indian and North American airs were composed. The result of my examination is a pretty strong conviction that all the real native music of Java is composed in a common enharmonic scale. Some of the cadences remind one of the Scotch music for the bagpipe. Others in the minor key have the flat seventh instead of the leading note or sharp seventh, which is one of the indications of antiquity. In many of the airs the recurrence of the same passages is artful and ingenious. The irregularity of the rhythm or measure, and the reiteration of the same sound, are characteristic of oriental music. The melodies are in general wild, plaintive, and interesting."

The Javanese do not note down or commit their music to writing. The national airs of which Raffles said he could count more than a hundred, are preserved by the ear alone; but many of these can scarcely be called airs at all. The sounds rather resemble variations in the chiming of bells. There is a tune called the "Kebu giru," literally "buffaloes frisking," played always to welcome the arrival of some important stranger. It is in reality nothing more than a quick ringing of bells, such as we might send forth from our spires or steeples on a day of general rejoicing, only the precussion being much lighter the melody steals through the air with a softer influence.

I have already said that I saw nowhere in the East anything like a real dramatic entertainment. Yet there are such things in Java, at least. A mask I have seen once or twice in Perak, but it appears that there are plays in the island where all the characters wear masks except when they play before the sovereign. The play is called topeng. The adventures of Pauji, a favourite hero of Javanese story, form the invariable subject. In general the Dalang, or manager of the entertainment, who sits in front of the stage, recites the story while the performers gesticulate accordingly. They are superbly dressed in a costume which is the more interesting, as it doubtless is very ancient. They have helmets and coronets not unlike those of the ancient Greeks, and various other peculiarities, such as being stripped to the waist in the court fashion, having a double sarong, large earrings, broad jewelled girdles, and armlets. Their helmets, and the end of a curved stick which they carry, are ornamented with curious crescents, out of which rise figures like the leather puppets of the Wyongs.

A kind of buffoon representing a dancing bear or a monkey occasionally comes on the stage. He has nothing to do with the play, which goes on as usual, while his antics cause considerable merriment amongst the spectators. This is a very common sort of episode in the Wyongs of the Malayan Peninsula. Jokes don't usually bear translation, but I must say that the fun seemed of the most meagre kind whenever an explanation was given to me of the cause of the general enjoyment. "Do you see that fly on that tree?" the clown would ask of the audience, and such an original and jocose observation would be greeted by roars of laughter. Occasionally one of the female performers would chide the funny man, and strike him gently with a rod, and when he would pretend to cry the enjoyment was uproarious.

There is also a kind of pantomime or assemblage of wild beasts represented by men dressed up, as you are told, like animals. But the resemblance would not strike any one. There is scarcely an attempt at imitation. The play consists merely of processions and fights, while a gong beats and the tom-tom is sounded. This is more like a common Hindu-street exhibition, and is only meant as an amusement for children. In a procession at Probolingo there was a man hideously painted, with a long paper tail trailing behind him. This, I was told, was meant as a tiger. Altogether the drama in Java possesses no points of interest except what remains in it of antiquity.

I was anxious before I left Djohiakarta to learn something about a plant which grows in the jungle near, and by means of which the natives succeed in poisoning many tigers. It is called "kala kambing," but Raffles speaks of it only as a twiner. Some specimens were brought to me, and I found it was an Asclepiad, and subsequently I made it out to be Sarlolobus dichotomus of R. Brown. There are three species known, but I never heard before that they were poisonous, or indeed that there were any violent poisons amongst the Asclepiads, though the milky juice of all of them has acrid and irritant properties.

A community of Benedictines (says a London paper) who were expelled from France a few years ago, have purchased the grand old abbey at Buckfastleigh, in the Dart Valley, which was the richest Cistercian house in the west before the Reformation; and for some time before the Conquest it was occupied by Benedictines. About 40 Fathers are now residing there, and before long they hope to restore the building upon something like its old scale.

Mr. Thomas Atkinson, manager of the New South Wales Government Railways and Tramways Advertising Company, has just returned from his trip among the Southern districts, and reports that trade in all the principal towns is flourishing, the late rains having done a vast amount of benefit; crops are looking splendid, and agriculturists are looking forward to a splendid season. The coming wool clip promises also to be the best seen for many years. Mr. Atkinson will be in his office, 89, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, every day between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and will be very happy to give business gentlemen any information regarding the benefits of advertising.—[Advt.]

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Tuesday, July 1.

LILLIS AND OTHERS V. DAVIS.

Mr. Heydon and Mr. H. F. Barton, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Heyden, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. A. H. Simpson and Mr. Lingen, instructed by Mr. Elliott Meyer, for the defendant.

The plaintiffs—Sylvester Joseph Lillis and Caroline Lillis (formerly Caroline Hoskisson), his wife, James Davis Hoskisson and Thos. Davis Hoskisson, infants, by their next friend, Sylvester Joseph Lillis—sued Joseph Davis, brother of Mrs. Lillis, the trustee of the estate of the late Thomas Hoskisson, of Barraba station, Liverpool Plains, to have it declared that he was an improper person to administer the estate, and also for an account of his dealings with the trust. The Barraba run formerly consisted of 57 square miles of country, or 36,480 acres. When the testator died on the 31st January, 1880, he was paying rent for only 20,000 acres, the difference in area being accounted for by the selections and other alienations from the original grazing right. The testator's freehold comprised 1500 acres. By his will the testator left his property, after the payment of his debts, and certain legacies to his children by Mrs. Lillis, then Mrs. Hoskisson, on their attaining majority or marrying, subject to the payment of an annuity of £500 to Mrs. Hoskisson. In September, 1880, the widow married the plaintiff, Sylvester Joseph Lillis, and went up to Barraba, where her husband was working a farm for six weeks. Subsequently the couple went to live at the station and remained there for six weeks. They returned to Windsor, where their parents resided, and stayed. They returned to the station in February, 1881, and stayed there till May. It was alleged that the second visit was partly due to anxiety as to how the defendant was carrying out his trust. Mrs. Lillis had given a receipt for £150 on account of her annuity for the first year, but it was alleged that she had not received the amount, and had only signed the document on the assurance that a voucher was indispensable for him. Various interviews took place at Sackville Reach, near Windsor, and at Sydney, with a view to getting a settlement of the annuity, which was in arrear, and the matter being put into the hands of solicitors a cheque passed in July, 1883, for £713, as amount of the annuity due for 1881 and 1882. The plaintiffs, however, were still dissatisfied, especially as the accounts were not filed, and proceedings were instituted. In March notification was sent to plaintiffs' solicitors that the accounts were ready for inspection, and a reply was returned that they would be inspected when filed; the accounts were filed in court on June 14 current. It was charged that the plaintiff was habitually intoxicated, that he was continually in the township of Barraba, thereby neglecting his duties; that he allowed calves of twelve months old and upwards to go unbranded; that he kept the fences in such a state of disrepair that stock were constantly trespassing; that he allowed horses to suffer and die through neglect; that he had used his position as trustee to take up selections for his own use, upon which he kept sheep to the prejudice of the station, which was exclusively devoted to cattle and horses, and that he had employed the station hands and rations in the management of his personal property. It was claimed that the defendant, whilst acting as superintendent and trustee, had purchased several free-selections on the station, and had purchased and depastured sheep not only upon his own lands, but on those of the station. It was submitted that these selections were held by the defendant as trustee. The first of these selections was made in 1873 by the testator in the name of Lewis Simpson, then a servant in his employ. On November 6, 1874, Simpson transferred to the defendant, and on the 4th June, 1876, the defendant made the necessary declaration as to the residence condition. On the 18th September, 1876, the defendant applied for a pre-lease of 960 acres to this selection. The defendant alleged that this having lapsed he in 1883 purchased it at auction. On the 2nd November, 1876, the defendant selected 320 acres in his own name, and in 1877 took up an additional selection to this of 160 acres. In virtue of these selections he had since the death of the testator obtained a pre-lease of 1260 acres. Since the death of the testator the defendant had purchased certain selections containing an area of 780 acres with preleases thereto, measuring 2220 acres, which were formerly taken up by one Bridge. It was claimed that the defendant held those lands for the estate. It was charged that the defendant had stocked these selections with sheep, and had allowed them to feed on other parts of the run, thereby causing large numbers of cattle belonging to the estate to die. The defendant had made a verbal arrangement with one Darby to sell the freehold of the estate for £2 per acre, the leasehold being given in, and 12 months allowed for the removal of the stock. He had, however, been restrained by injunction from carrying out this sale. The prayer of the claim was that the injunction be made perpetual; that the defendant be removed from the office of trustee; that the free selections and sheep are held by him in trust for the estate, and that an account of the estate might be taken, in which the defendant should be charged with all sums which he might have received but for his wilful neglect and default. The evidence was heard on June 17, 19, 23, 24, 26. The argument was commenced on the 30th, and was concluded to-day.

Mrs. Lillis, one of the plaintiffs, spoke of the conduct of the defendant in reference to the management of the estate; she gave specific instances of his having been intoxicated, and said that he was constantly away from the station at the township, and when he returned home he was in a muddled state; the fences were not kept up, and strange cattle trespassed in the paddocks; she had often heard her late husband speaking to the testator about the necessity for blocking selectors by taking up lands for the station; she had never heard that Simpson's selection was given to the defendant, but she remembered hearing the testator tell defendant to get the transfer papers ready for it; she knew the testator had given the defendant a piece of land on the Hawkesbury after the lives of his parents.

Sylvester Joseph Lillis, who married the testator's widow, endorsed what Mrs. Lillis had said as to defendant's habits of intemperance. He detailed instances of trespasses, and other evidences of bad management with regard to the horses kept on the station; he considered that the station could be very much better managed than it was, especially by the removal of the defendant's sheep, and the growth of winter food for young stock; he considered that a great deal of the freehold land could be cut up and sold in 100 acre farms at £12 per acre; the station properly managed ought to produce £2000 a year.

Lewis Simpson stated that he had taken up the first selection in question for the testator, and had received £5 and a dray for transferring it to Mr. Hoskisson. He had shepherded the defendant's sheep on this selection, and whilst doing so had received had received his rations out of the ordinary station casks; he remembered the defendant coming to his place one night just at dusk; he was so drunk that he had to take him home; they started at 10 o'clock, and it took them four hours to get to the station, a distance of eight miles; a man connected with the station lived on it after he transferred; he had taken the defendant's sheep wherever he could get grass.

Henry John Thompson, formerly a stockman on the run, gave evidence that he had taken rations out of the station casks to the shepherd employed by the defendant; he also detailed many instances of trespasses; the defendant's sheep had been put upon the good winter country; he had frequently seen the defendant going and returning from Barraba twice a day; he had frequently seen him drunk in Barraba; the fences were not kept in good repair, and one in particular round the bull paddock was so bad that it would not hold cattle at all.

Denis M'Mahon, who had served notice of the injunction upon the defendant, stated that he was then under the influence of drink; he also spoke of his being drunk once or twice; the witness also gave evidence as to trespasses.

Constable H. W. King, formerly stationed at Barraba, stated that he had seen the defendant under the influence of liquor three or four times; he used to see him in town twice or three times a week, perhaps oftener.

This closed the plaintiffs' case.

Mrs. Elizabeth Davis, mother of the defendant and Mrs. Lillis, stated that Mrs. Lillis had promised to do all she could to help the defendant by accepting less than the amount of her annuity until the estate got into a better position; she had never seen the defendant the worse for liquor.

James Salter, farmer; A. Witten, grazier; Edward Newton, storekeeper; H. Tuffrey, selector; J. M'Neil, station superintendent; and Wm. Beeson, stockman on the run, all gave evidence in rebuttal of the plaintiffs' case. Though some of them had seen the defendant take a few glasses, and one or two had actually seen him drunk, they did not consider him habitually addicted to drink. There was considerable agreement on their part that the run was managed like other runs, and the trespasses were not of an unusual character. Several, however, admitted in cross-examination that cattle would not stay on unenclosed land with sheep, and if the feed got low in winter would probably suffer. The witness Salter, who is defendant's brother-in-law, said there was about 500 acres of the freehold which would bring £10 an acre if sold in farms.

Joseph Davis, the defendant, deposed that the testator was his brother-in-law; in 1867 he had to one superintendent of Gravesend, a station belonging to testator's father; in 1874 he went to Barraba to manage for the testator; in testator's lifetime the estate never produced anything like £2000 per annum; in 1878 not a hoof was sent to Sydney, two-thirds of the stock having been lost through drought; he had not been able to pay any of the legacies under the will except one of £100 to testator's brother. The witness explained all the instances which had been referred to by Mr. and Mrs. Lillis in their evidence as to his intoxicated habits; witness had been very intimate with the testator since he saved his life when crossing the Gwydir River, in 1871; witness had offered to transfer Simpson's selection to him, but he had told him three or four times he would never take it; testator also conveyed 15 acres of land on the Hawkesbury to him two years before he knew anything about it; witness's own selection of 320 acres was taken up with money found by the testator, but he found the money himself for the additional selection; testator also put up a portion of the fencing; witness effected all the other improvements; this selection had been formerly selected, but had lapsed, and witness told testator there were a number of hostile selectors who wanted to get it; he told witness to get it if he could as it might be of some use to him some day; he took up a pre-lease of 1260 acres in virtue of this selection because there were hostile selectors who would have done so, and the estate was not in a position to secure it; Budge's selections of 780 acres, with 2500 sheep, were purchased by him in 1881 for £1400; he had tried to carry out the testator's wishes by securing this for the estate, but the Commercial Bank would not advance the money because they considered that he had no power to enter into such a transaction; witness had borrowed £700 from the agents who negotiated the sale, and this he paid in cash; the rest had to be paid in 12 months, without interest; he got two clips of wool off the sheep in 13 months after buying them; in consequence of Budge's selections at the Long Arm being very central and good country, he left them to the cattle, in order that the run might be worked conveniently, and shepherded the sheep on Simpson's selections; the Long Arm had always been the home of the cattle, and there was water in a creek which saved them from travelling over a rough mountain to drink; these sheep might have trespassed a little, but not much; there were not so many trespasses now as when he first went on the run, and all the fences were up; he thought two men and a boy were quite sufficient to work the property now that it was all fenced in; when testator died, and witness saw the terms of the will, he told Mrs. Lillis that it was impossible to pay her £500 out of the earning of the station, and she said she would take £250 for five years; the gross returns for 1882 were £600 or £700, in 1883 £1000, and this year £1200 had been received already, cattle having been a good price; the working expenses, including rent, were about £500; the reason of the falling-off in 1882 was the losses in 1880, because the calves branded in 1880 would have then come into the market; witness had always kept his accounts regularly, and had put them in the hands of the late Mr. S. C. Brown, in order that they might be made up for filing in the court; he admitted that Mrs. Davis had not received the whole of the £150 for which she gave a receipt during the first year of his trust, but he thought she had had more than £95; he was willing to resign if proper persons were appointed to succeed him in the trust; he had dismissed both the witnesses Simpson and Thompson from the station employment; he had abstained from drinking any spirits for three months on two occasions, because he thought he was better without them; he knew all along that he had to file accounts; although he had expressed an opinion that the property would be a valuable one for the children, he still thought it better to sell it, because it was impossible to work it when he was pressed for this annuity of £500.

George Hayes stated that when he was a stockman on the station he was camped one night on Simpson's selection, when he heard defendant offer to transfer the land; testator said, "No, Davis, I will never take it from you."

Amos Green, defendant's nephew, and Mrs. Haydon, who keeps an hotel near Barraba, were both examined to disprove the charges of intoxication.

Elliot Meyer, defendant's solicitor, stated that he received the books after the death of Mr. S. C. Brown. He did not press on with the accounts, because he understood that if the annuity was paid their immediate production would not be insisted upon.

Mr. Heydon submitted that the evidence had disclosed a state of things which rendered it necessary that the plaintiff should have come before the Court in some way or other. The testator had died in January, 1880. The accounts were first asked for in September, 1882, and then again peremptorily in April, 1883, three years and three months after the death of the testator. It was admitted that the defendant was conversant with the duties of bookkeeping, and that he knew he had to file accounts. The excuses urged did not explain the delay, and the accounts were not filed till three months after the claim was filed. As to Simpson's selection, he contended that the fact of defendant having offered to transfer to the testator showed that it was held in trust. It was evident by the selections made surrounding this one, on account of the station, that the testator was desirous of securing that part of the run. There was no writing to show that this selection was a gift to the defendant, as had been the case with the 15 acres given to defendant on the Hawkesbury. It was not likely that a squatter would make anyone a present of a selection in the heart of his run. Nothing had been said to Mrs. Lillis by testator of the gift, though she knew about the conveyance of the Hawkesbury property. The statement of the defendant as to the intention of the testator to make him a present of the selection was unsupported, except by Hayes' evidence. The testator might have said something to which he did not intend to adhere. If the question of the defendant's own selection were one between testator and defendant, then Hoskisson could not have enforced a transfer since the Act of 1875, which made dummyism a misdemeanour. The case, however, had become different, because the defendant had accepted a new trust, and the cestui que trusts were innocent parties. All the probabilities were in favour of its being a dummy selection, seeing that it was a valuable piece of land which had been fought for, and had been taken up with testator's money. It was admitted that both Simpson's and defendant's selections were used for the purposes of the station until testator's death, therefore the claims set up by defendant were open to the suspicion of having been set up since the testator's death, when the defendant had the advantage of the situation. If defendant's statement as to Budge's selections was true, then he seemed to have done something which was rather an advantage to the estate; but why was not the manager of the bank, who refused to advance on the powers of the will, called? He submitted that the powers to mortgage and generally manage the station would have enabled the defendant to secure Budge's property, sell the sheep, and mortgage the selections for the balance. The defendant had given a very unsatisfactory account of his reason for wishing to sell the property—viz., that he was being pressed for the annuity. The defendant had admitted that the sale would be otherwise a bad thing for the estate. The allegation that the receipt for £150 given by Mrs. Lillis on account of the first annuity was so given because the defendant alleged that it was necessary for him to have a voucher, and on a promise that he would pay the balance. It was not stated until late in the correspondence that the station could not pay the annuity. The attempt to sell was a very improper thing. It had been used as a threat before the plaintiffs left the station. In consideration of the whole case he said that the defendant had shown that he was not fit to be a trustee, and that some one in whom more confidence could be reposed should be appointed. He claimed that the prayers of the claim should be granted.

Mr. Barton also argued on behalf of the plaintiffs. The defendant took Simpson's selection as an express trust with notice, and he argued that the matter came within the 9th section of the Statute of Frauds, therefore the trust could only be got rid of by writing. It was admitted that the selection in defendant's name had been taken up with the money of the trustee; therefore the trust came within Barton v. Muir. He had, moreover, been enabled to take up the additional land by reason of his position as a trustee. Muckleston v. Brown, 6 Vesey, was an authority which met the Act of 1875, and enabled a Court of Equity to act in the interests of innocent parties. There was a great difference between an heir coming into Equity for relief which would have been denied his ancestor on the ground of fraud. The pre-leases had belonged to the estate, and therefore came within the principle that a trustee cannot buy the property of the cestui que trust. It was not a question whether he had done this to advantage, but whether he might put the purchase to advantage. Budge's lands came very much under the same principle, because his duty as a trustee conflicted with his private interests.

Mr. A. H. Simpson, for the defendant, argued that Simpson's selection had been spoken of by the testator as if it had been the defendant's all along. The defendant seemed to be in full possession, because the testator had spoken of not taking it back from him. The evidence of Mason, who had not been called, might have shed some light upon it. The fact that the selection was left in defendant's name, after the conditions had been fulfilled, pointed to the truth of defendant's statement. If there had been a resulting trust in favour of the testator, it was got rid of by the gift. Simpson was not an express trustee, therefore Davis became a resulting trustee, and his trust could be got rid of by parol agreement. Mrs. Lillis' evidence of the gift of the property on the Hawkesbury showed that she did not know much about her husband's affairs. She knew nothing about the deed, and had simply said that it was to go to the defendant after her parents. He submitted that the defendant was clearly entitled to keep Budge's selections for his own benefit. The defendant had purchased the selections and pre-lease from Budge, so that it was not an exercise of the opportunities of a trustee in taking up land.

His Honor said he would stop the learned counsel as to a declaration of trust in respect to Budge's selection, but he might still consider the fact of the purchase in regard to his fitness to be a trustee. It might be shown that he had thought more of himself than of his trust. There was a minor point, as to whether he might not have been more zealous in his efforts to secure the property for the estate, in accordance with the admitted wishes of the testator.

Mr. Simpson submitted that the Court would not decide against the defendant on the minor point until he had had an opportunity of meeting it specifically. There was no principle which prevented a trustee from taking up a pre-lease in right of his own land. Even if the Court were against the defendant on this point, it could not be reckoned as constituting misconduct. The defendant had paid as much as he could on account of the annuity. He had not claimed the money as being due to him. They had the evidence of Mrs. Davis to support the defendant's assertion that Mrs. Lillis had offered to accept less than the amount of her annuity. The defendant had admitted that he was willing to pay the balance of the first year out of the assets of the estate. There was a charge on the pleadings of misconduct which had to be met. He would point out that the filing of the accounts in the Ecclesiastical Court was a different thing to that in Equity. In the Ecclesiastical Court the defendant would be punished by the non-allowance of commission. Here the matter was different. Evidence had been given as to the delay caused through the death of Mr. S. C. Brown, and subsequently as to the impression which Mr. Meyer, the solicitor, had that accounts were not pressed, and that all that was wanted was the annuity. If the plaintiffs had sincerely wanted to see the accounts they could have got an order to inspect the books. Instead of doing this they had crammed the claim full of charges which had not been substantiated, and now the question of accounts was put into the forefront. The testator had contemplated the sale of the property by the trustee, and putting it under offer, had acted under the advice of his solicitor. He submitted that the charges as to intoxication, mismanagement, unbranded calves, broken fences, and neglect, had all broken down. Of course an account must be taken, but not on the ground of default, because nothing had been proved to justify such a direction. He contended that the plaintiffs should pay all costs, at any rate those incurred after notice was sent to them that the accounts were ready for their inspection.

Mr. Lingen followed his leader for the defendant. He defended the proposed sale, and said it was one which would have been advantageous to the estate. There was Mrs. Lillis demanding her annuity without abatement when the income was not sufficient to meet it. The plaintiff had actually bid 30s. per acre at the auction sale, whereas the agreement with Darby was for £2. When the children came of age there would have to be a partition suit. Moreover, the sale would have deprived the defendant of £100 a year and a comfortable home. He contended that the 9th section of the Statute of Frauds did not apply to Simpson's selection, seeing that it was a resulting trust. At any rate, there had been acquiescence on the part of Mrs. Lillis, because she had been aware that the defendant's sheep had been running thereon for four years. The defendant had a perfect right to take up the pre-lease to his own selection. It might be a new point, but he considered it one of importance, that a trustee by assuming a trust did not forfeit any right that was in him before. The right to this pre-lease was in the defendant before the testator made his will. A trustee was debarred from making any profit out of his trust, but he had yet to learn that a trustee had to forego any of his individual rights. Nothing that the trustee could have done could have prevented the pre-lease from being taken up by someone else.

Mr. Heydon, in reply, said that if the conduct of the defendant had been different, his excuses for not filing accounts might not have been regarded as being so reprehensible. The whole conduct of the estate, especially in regard to its sale, was fraught with circumstances which excited suspicion. The defendant had shrouded himself in darkness, and had failed to pay the annuity, was selling the stock, and disposing of the estate. Delay in filing accounts facilitated fraud. The defendant could not escape the consequences of failure to file, by merely saying he would forego the commission of trustee. Such self-denial did not operate to cover his laches as executor. He submitted that the plaintiffs were justified in coming to the Court for the injunction to prevent the sale of the station. In his defence the defendant had set out that the sale was the best thing that could be done, yet in his evidence he had said that it was not, because it would be better for the cestuis que trusts to keep it. It could not be said in reference to the sale of Darby that the estate was not paying. It was made in 1883, when the gross receipts had been over £1400. If the selection of Simpson had been a gift to defendant, it was more than the testator had left to his eldest son, not to say anything of the 15 acres on the Hawkesbury which had been conveyed to him. Moreover, in his defence the defendant had set out, not that Simpson's selection was given to him, but that he had purchased it. This looked as if he had an idea that his right to this was questionable. The defendant should not have been satisfied with the refusal of the bank to advance the money to purchase Budge's selection, but should at least have consulted his own solicitor about it. He seemed to have availed himself of an excuse to get the property for himself. If a man had rights which he could exert against the trust he should not accept the trust. The defendant had married one of the first family, who had been, relatively speaking, cut off from the will. It may be that his wife had used her influence, and the defendant had done what he had with a view to bringing about a readjustment of the estate. Although the evidence of intoxication had not been confined to specific instances, still they had a specimen in Simpson's evidence that on one occasion he went and drank with his own shepherd in such a way that he could not find his own way home. He submitted that no substantial answer had been made to the plaintiffs' case. The testator in his will had not contemplated that the trustee should always have remained superintendent. He submitted that if there had been any profit made by the defendant out of the estate, it should have been taken into account before the Master.

His Honor, in giving judgment, said it had been urged that many of the charges brought against the defendant had not been heard of until the beginning of the suit, but it must be remembered that when people were driven into litigation they hunted up information and heard of facts that were unknown to them before. In this case he had no hesitation in putting a number of these charges aside as not having been sufficiently proved. His mind was by no means clear on the subject of the defendant's drunkenness. There was positive evidence on the side of the plaintiffs, whilst the defendant had only sought to bring forward testimony of a negative character, which was, comparatively speaking, of very little value. Although his mind was not relieved from very serious doubt as to whether the defendant had not indulged too freely in intoxicating drink, still he did not think the matter so distinctly proved that he could use it as a ground for his removal from his trusteeship, although it would not be without weight among the reasons for his decision. The evidence as to the fences being kept in disrepair was so contradictory that he must put that on one side. He did not consider the allegations as to the trespasses of cattle and improper management sufficiently clear to enable him to act upon it. He knew from long experience how difficult it was to avoid trespasses of this kind, especially where there were neighbours or selectors on the run whose consciences were not so strong as to lead them to take any special steps to prevent their stock from eating the grass of their neighbours. Nor did he think there was anything in the charge that a sufficient number of hands had not been kept on the station, because it seemed that a superintendent, with two men and a boy, should be sufficient to manage a herd which did not seem to have ever exceeded 2000 at any time, especially as the cultivation seemed to be confined to hay for the horses. A very much more serious matter called for attention, when it was found that the defendant had somehow or other been the owner or occupier of a large quantity of land which formerly belonged to the run. In the first place, if he had done this improperly he ought unhesitatingly to be dismissed; and in the second, it put him in a position where his interests conflicted with those for whom he held his trust. It was dangerous that he should be allowed to remain in the latter position, because he had hourly to choose between himself and his trust under circumstances which would be likely to lead to the trust going to the wall. He had already intimated that he could not interfere with respect to two of these selections. If he did so with respect to the one in defendant's own name he would be acting directly counter to the Act of 1875, which made the taking up of property in the way charged not only illegal but criminal. The Court could not hold him a trustee as to Budge's selections, because at the time of testator's death those lands were altogether outside his trust. He could not say, however, that he liked the defendant's conduct in relation to this matter. He knew that it was the testator's wish that these selections which were in the market should be purchased, but he did not seem to have been as zealous in his efforts to carry out what he, as superintendent of a cattle station, must have known was his wish, viz., to secure this land and get rid of the sheep. If he had desired to carry out the testator's directions, he might, seeing that the testator had been so bountiful to him, have borrowed the money, purchased the property and sold the sheep, whilst the selections would have stood as security for the balance. When he did buy this property it would have been far better for him to have resigned his trust rather than that his interests came in conflict with those of his trust. As to Simpson's selection there was no doubt that it was originally taken up on behalf of Hoskisson. His opinion was decidedly against the defendant's assertion that it was transferred from Simpson to him for his benefit. There was no evidence at all that was contemplated. It was evident that defendant had resided on it in a way to enable him to make a declaration in respect to the condition of residence. The testator had paid the deposit when it was taken up, had effected the improvements, and during his lifetime it was kept for the station cattle whilst a station hand was living there. If there were no Statute of Frauds he would hesitate to adopt the story which the defendant had given as to this gift. It was the testator's selection, and was occupied by him up to his death, and now the Court was asked, on the strength of oral evidence of conversations, to say that there was this transfer to the defendant. He could not be satisfied by the evidence of the defendant, confirmed as it had been by what one witness heard round the camp-fire. He, therefore, considered himself bound to hold that the defendant was a trustee for Simpson's selection with its pre-lease. He had some doubt as to the pre-lease to the defendant's own selection of 420 acres, but he felt that the lease must go with the selection to which it was attached. The matter of accounts was a serious feature in the case. He (defendant) had been four and a half years in his trust, and should have filed his inventory of the chattel estate in six months, and his accounts in 15 months. Neither of these duties had been carried out, and the accounts had not been filed until the 14th June, nearly two months after the cause had been set down for trial. The death of Mr. S. C. Brown might account for two or three months of the delay, but taken altogether the defendant's failure in this respect was inexcusable. The conduct of the defendant in entering into this proposal to sell the station to his neighbour Darby at a time when he knew that there were threats of proceedings in respect to this annuity, without consulting his cestui que trusts, was altogether inexcusable. He had said that he did this because he could not pay the annuity, yet it was shown that at this very time he had 200 head of fat cattle and 20 young bulls ready for sale. There could have been no immediate necessity for that step, seeing that his previous year's income had been £1400 gross. He would certainly not allow the defendant to continue in his trust alone, so that he would not be in a position to act in such a summary and arbitrary way again. On the whole he thought it better that the defendant should withdraw from his trust or be removed. He did not think there had been any misconduct with regard to the accounts, therefore he would not give directions to the master to take the accounts adversely. He thought that the suit had been very properly brought, because the defendant had been nursing himself up too much with his trust. He would order that the defendant be removed from his trust, and inasmuch as he had been so negligent in filing his accounts, he should pay the costs up to and inclusive of the hearing with those of the injunction proceedings. The defendant could continue in the trust and management until new trustees were appointed, being restrained from selling the land, and from dealing with the stock except in the ordinary course of business.

After hearing further argument from defendant's counsel, His Honor said the defendant could have any costs which had been incurred with reference to the allegations as to the disrepair of fences, the trespasses of cattle, unbranded cattle, failure to muster, and any other expenses counsel could found any point on.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

The Bench at the Central Police Court yesterday was occupied by Mr. Mair, Deputy Stipendiary Magistrate.

William Jackson alias [illegible] was sent to gaol for a month for stealing two letters from the shop of Sang Hing, Goulburn-street. The prosecutor is a greengrocer and his evidence was that on Thursday morning last the prisoner entered his shop and stole the letters. He then went out, and Sang Hing followed him and gave him into custody. Constable West, who arrested him, stated that Jackson denied having been in Sang Hing's shop, but when he searched the prisoner, he found one of the stolen letters under his shirt.

Pattie Chapman was fined £10, with costs, for assaulting Edwin A. Davis, on Friday last, just outside the District Court. The defence was that the defendant had been very much provoked by the plaintiff's conduct in a business transaction they had had together.

Robert Johnston was sent to gaol for six months on the charge of being found on the premises of Henry M'Pherson, with intent to commit a felony. The prosecutor and a witness stated that early on Sunday morning they saw the prisoner in M'Pherson's yard tampering with a quantity of lead, which he had rolled up, evidently to carry away. He was on his hands and knees, and the prosecutor made him retain that position until a constable could be summoned to take him into custody.

Henry Lahiff was sentenced to two months' hard labour for assaulting Henry Buckingham. The prisoner pleaded guilty.

William Lewis, who pleaded guilty to having a quantity of bags in his possession which might reasonably be expected to have been stolen, was sent to gaol for a month.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Addison, S.M., disposed of the business in the Charge Court, and Mr. Johnson, S.M., dealt with a number of cases in the Summons Court yesterday.

Several persons were fined for drunkenness.

Maude Stanley, 17, was fined 20s., in default 14 days' imprisonment, for having used indecent language in Pitt-street.

Kate Ryan, 20, charged with having used indecent language in the bar of the Bristol Hotel, York-street, was fined 20s., in default 14 days' imprisonment.

Henry Nelson, 40, described as a waiter, was fined 40s., in default one month's imprisonment, for indecent behaviour in Sussex-street.

Robert Gray, charged with having been found unlawfully on the premises of the Australian Club, was sent to gaol for 14 days.

Margaret Cotter was fined £5, in default two months' imprisonment, upon a charge of having assaulted a child named Margaret Smith, by throwing boiling water over her.

Denis Collins (26), charged with having used obscene language in the bar of the Manaro Hotel, was fined 60s., in default two months' imprisonment.

Tamini Giovanni, an Italian, was placed in the dock, charged, on remand, with inflicting grievous bodily harm on one Carlo dell' Osso, also an Italian, on Saturday, the 14th ultimo. The facts of the case as stated by the prosecutor show that the assault was of a serious character. The two men had known each other only about six weeks, and about 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the day in question left No. 75, Goulburn-street, for Bondi. They took a tram from Liverpool-street to the Tea Gardens at Waverley, where they got out, and started to walk together through the bush between Bondi and No. 4 section of the sewerage works; after proceeding some distance the prisoner said "I am going to kill you; you are a dead man." Prisoner had a tomahawk uplifted in his hand. Prosecutor asked him what he was doing, and prisoner gave him a blow on the head. A struggle for life then ensued between the two men, and prosecutor eventually proved too much for his assailant, and wrenching the tomahawk away from him, inflicted serious wounds in defence, and then staggered for help. The weapon with which the wounds were inflicted was a tomahawk and hammer combined, something like a shingling hammer in shape, only broader in the blade. On the head are the brand and the maker's name, thus:—No. 2, Wm. H. Weed. The prosecutor had £11 17s. 6½d. on him at the time, a valuable double-case gold watch and chain, which had cost £40, and three rings, besides a Savings Bank passbook on the Haymarket branch for £25. It was stated by the prosecutor that the prisoner was aware that he had valuables on him. Dr. Bruce, one of the medical officers of the Sydney Hospital, deposed that he admitted the prosecutor into the hospital, and found that he was suffering from three severe scalp wounds and also wounds on his hands; the prisoner was afterwards brought to the hospital by the police. This concluded the evidence, and the prisoner was committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

The business of the Newtown Police Court was conducted for the first time on Tuesday in the new temporary courthouse, late the Temperance Hall. Mr. G. O'Malley Clarke presided, and disposed of the following cases:—

Henry Gainer, for using indecent language in King-street, Newtown, on the 15th September last, was fined 20s., with 7s. 4d. costs, or seven days.

Margaret Conroy was fined 20s., or seven days, for being drunk on Croydon-road, and for using obscene language at the same time and place she was fined £3, or one month in gaol.

John Quinn, at the instance of Sub-inspector Larkins, for slaughtering one head of cattle without having obtained a license, was fined £10, with 6s. 8d. costs, or one month in gaol.

Amie Booth, for using obscene language, was fined 20s., with 4s. 10d. costs, or seven days' imprisonment.

Michael J. Spooner was fined 20s., costs 2s. 6d., or seven days in gaol, for careless driving.

L. Belman was fined 40s., with 2s. 6d. costs, for riotous behaviour; and William Simms, for a similar offence, had to pay 10s., with 2s. 6d. costs, or go to gaol for two days.

William Miller, for having no name on his cart, was fined 10s., with 2s. 6d. costs, or two days in gaol.

Elizabeth Easton, the licensee of the Kingston Hotel, Regent-street, Newtown, for a breach of the Licensing Act in selling liquor after 11 p.m. on the 19th June, was fined £3, with 5s. 6d. costs, or one month's imprisonment.

W. C. Fallick sued William Ievers for the recovery of the possession of a house. A seven days' warrant was ordered to issue, defendant to pay 5s. 6d. costs.

Several residents were fined in small amounts for allowing cattle to stray in the streets.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you kindly permit me in passing to make two corrections in the report of the remarks which I made as a member of the deputation on Friday last?

1. The sentence, "He received a communication from the Minister of Education on 2nd February, 1881, stating that this was a misapprehension," should read, "stating that the use of the First and Second Reading Books had been suspended in some schools owing to misapprehension on the part of the teachers," &c.

2. I am represented as having said—"In the minutes of the Chief Inspector of 7th June, 1884, it was stated that these books (the I. N. B. reading books) were used as connected with religious instruction with an equivalent series, and this equivalent series was now Collins';" but the minute of the Chief Inspector, from which I quoted, states on the contrary "that these books have never been viewed as connected with religious instruction" . . . and . . . that "there is a double series of Irish books, one a reading series and the other a Scripture lesson series, and that while the latter has been retained in its entirety and is still in use, an improved series (Collins') has been authorised as an equivalent to the reading series."

But my principal object in writing you is to request that you would be good enough to publish the affirmative reply of the Minister to the question whether his statement that the Irish National books were still regularly and continuously read throughout the Public schools applied to reading books 1, 2, 3, and 4, which contain so much general religious instruction, as well as the books known as Scriptural lessons. Your reporter's notes will doubtless contain both the question and the answer. Yours, &c.,

W. MOORE-WHITE, LL.D.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A question has been very properly raised in regard to the representative character of the recent conference on religious instruction in our Public schools. I know not how it may be with others who accepted the Bishop's invitation to be present, but no utterance of mine as a member of that conference carried any weight with it save as conveying my own individual opinion. It is quite possible that when the Congregational churches give expression to their own views in the customary and authorised way, they may deem it right to endorse the dual system of voluntary religious instruction proposed by the Bishop and adopted by the conference. I write to make it clear beyond the possibility of mistake, that anything I have said heretofore in public, or that I may say hereafter, binds no one but myself, unless, indeed, I speak as an elected representative of the churches to which I belong. I am, &c.,

PARLIAMENT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, JULY 1.

The House met in pursuance of adjournment.

The CLERK announced that he had received a letter from Mr. Speaker stating that he had again sprained his foot, and his medical adviser stated that he was unable to attend the House. In accordance with the second standing order, the Chairman of Committees would take the chair for that day only.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER took the chair at 4.20.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Mr. DIBBS, in reply to Mr. Watson, said that conflicting petitions had been forwarded to the Department with reference to the position of the station at Gundagai, and every consideration would be given to them after the respective sites had been inspected.

Mr. DIBBS, in reply to Mr. Watson, said that every effort would be made to get the railway to Coolac opened before the wool season commenced.

Mr. STUART, in reply to Mr. Hugh Taylor, said the Land Bill now before the House contained sufficient power to secure the dedication of a site for public baths at Parramatta North out of the Market Reserve.

Mr. DIBBS, in reply to Mr. Hugh Taylor, said that certain ... at Parramatta would be reported on by an officer.

Mr. TRICKETT, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said that the new school at Wee-Waa would probably be ready for occupation by the end of this year.

Mr. DIBBS, in reply to Mr. Quin, said the question of the immediate construction of a railway to Wilcannia would be promptly considered by Government.

Mr. FARNELL, in reply to Mr. Levien, said that the conditional purchases of the defendant in the action of the City Bank v. Maitland, tried at Young lately, with reference to certain conditional purchases upon the Memagong station, had been previously cancelled, and although the circumstances there disclosed and the finding of the jury pointed strongly to the presumption that they were not bona-fide, it was necessary that the matter should undergo very full and careful inquiry and consideration before any proceedings were undertaken therein. Step were immediately taken, however, for arresting repayment of the deposits on the cancelled selections pending a final decision in the matters involved.

Mr. TRICKETT, in reply to Mr. Buchanan, said that it was the intention of the present Government to adhere firmly to the principle that no State-aid would be given to denominational schools. Having the Public Instruction Act in view, the Government intended to adhere to its provisions, and in no way to change its policy.

DEPUTY-CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. STUART (by consent) moved, without notice,—"That Louis Francis Heydon, Esq., do take the chair in committee of the Whole House for this day only."

The motion was agreed to.

DEFECT IN THE LAND LAW.

Mr. GARRETT, without notice, asked the Minister for Lands whether it was the intention of the Government to bring in a bill to remove the doubt raised in regard to the land law by an expression of opinion given by Mr. Justice Windeyer last week, in the case of Dangar v. Nicholls. The defendant in this case had taken up, under one application under the Act of 1875 a selection of 445 acres; and he afterwards sought to take up 80 acres on a squatter's run. The squatter (Mr. Dangar) brought him before the Court for trespass on the ground that it was improved land, but in deciding the case Judge Windeyer had taken the other ground, that the selector could not take up more than 320 acres. Under the 21st section of the Act of 1861 persons were allowed to take up original and additional conditional purchases up to 320 acres, and no more. In the Act of 1875 persons were given the right to take up 640 acres, but that Act did not in express terms repeal the limitation to 320 acres provided in the Act of 1861, and the latter was therefore still in force; and if a man did not in the first application take up land to the extent of 640 acres, he could not afterwards take up another additional conditional purchase. The Judge had on this ground—that the defendant had made an additional selection that took his area over 320 acres—decided that the selection was void. This appeared to be the law, and if it was the law in this case it would be so in thousands of others, in which persons had spent large sums of money in improving their holdings, and their titles would now be shown to be invalid. Every such selection taken up during the last nine years would be invalid if this reading of the law was correct, and it was very necessary that all doubt should be removed, and this could be done by a short bill dealing explicitly with the case. Mr. Justice Windeyer almost had admitted that what he decided was not the intention of the Legislature, but that the words necessary to express their intention had not been used.

Mr. FARNELL said that the case had not been decided as the hon. member stated. It had been decided against Nicholls on the ground of the £40 worth of improvements, and the Judge incidentally gave an opinion on the law as it stood. But this was not a decision of the Court, and it would be necessary to have the ruling of the Full Court to constitute a decision by which a bill would be rendered imperative. At the same time, he feared the Judge's law was correct, and that the intention to extend the rights of selectors by the bill of 1875 was not really carried out, and the conditional purchaser could take up only 640 acres, and that in the first instance. He had already consulted with his colleague, the Attorney-General, who had the matter under consideration with the view of remedying this defect in the law, and if the Attorney-General advised him that the law was imperfect it would be the duty of the Government to bring in a bill at the earliest moment to legalise those selections which had been made under these conditions. (Hear, hear.)

PAPERS.

Mr. STUART laid on the table the report of the Executive Commissioner at the Calcutta Exhibition, and a copy of by-laws of the Municipal District of Wilcannia, under the Nuisances Prevention Act of 1875.

Mr. DIBBS laid on the table an abstract of the revenue receipts and expenditure of the colony for the quarter and the year ending 30th June, 1884; also a copy of a regulation framed under the Customs Regulation Act, 1879.

The documents were ordered to be printed.

COOTAMUNDRY ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH LAND SALE BILL.

Mr. FLETCHER moved the third reading of the Cootamundry Roman Catholic Church Land Sale Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and it was ordered that the bill be sent to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

BOOROWA ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH LAND SALE BILL.

Mr. FLETCHER moved the third reading of the Boorowa Roman Catholic Church Land Sale Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and it was ordered that the bill be sent to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

PETTY SESSIONS JURISDICTION EXTENSION BILL.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR moved the third reading of the Petty Sessions Jurisdiction Extension Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and it was ordered that the bill be sent to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. LUSCOMBE moved the adjournment of the House, in order, as he stated, to call attention to the conduct of Mr. James Watson, the member for Gundagai. He said that he would bring forward certain matters affecting that hon. member which he considered should no longer allow him to remain in the House.

Mr. SPEAKER reminded the hon. member that the conduct of an hon. member could not be impugned even under cover of a motion for adjournment; but if a charge were to be made against an hon. member, it would have to be made by a specific motion.

Mr. LUSCOMBE then went on to refer to a grievance which existed amongst the inhabitants of Adamstown, inasmuch as they had petitioned the Government to have that place formed into a municipality, and nothing had apparently been done in the matter.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR deprecated the representative of the minority of the electorate of Northumberland making an attack upon an hon. member of the Opposition who was not in a position to defend himself. It was characteristic of his cowardice.

Mr. SPEAKER: The term cowardice, as applied to any hon. member, is out of order, and must not be used.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: It is a fortunate thing for him that his sins cannot be fully exposed, because if they might be, I should accuse him not only of cowardice but of all sorts of currish villainy.

The SPEAKER: The hon. member has no right to apply such language to any hon. member, or to anything that he has done, and I beg of the hon. member not to persist in it even by insinuation.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: The hon. member's antiquity ought to be a safeguard against his committing such errors.

Mr. SPEAKER: Order, order.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: I have pointed out that his antiquity ought to be his safeguard, because we are aware that he is a very old man. He is one of the creatures that God made on the fourth day; for we read that on the fourth day God made all creeping things. (Laughter and "order, order.")

Mr. SPEAKER: I must say that such language must be very offensive, and the hon. member should not persist in it.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: Having applied the term creeping thing to him, I would be libelling any creator ——

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member is defending the course of conduct he has taken. The hon. member is not in order in applying the term "creeping thing" to any hon. member of this House, and if he persist in doing so I must appeal to the House to uphold its dignity. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: Undoubtedly, under the special circumstances it would be out of order. It would be a gross and unwarrantable application of flattery, and flattery ought not to be used. Having flattered him, and that flattery being out of order, I shall proceed to deal with him in connection with plain facts. He comes here as the representative of a minority, and he makes a charge which cannot be formally sustained or legally put, and he makes it knowing that the Deputy Speaker will order him to withdraw it. He is not true to his instincts; he is guilty of an unpardonable action.

Mr. LUSCOMBE: The hon. member stated that I made this motion with the knowledge that you, Sir, would order it to be withdrawn. I had no intention of bringing forward a case with the knowledge that it would be out of order.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: His remarks are entirely out of order. I give him credit for ignorance in the matter. In fact, I give him credit for all the ignorance a man can possess.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member's remarks are grossly out of order, and I must repeat my request that he will not persist in his attack upon the hon. member or any other hon. member. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: You might, at the same time you are calling upon me to desist, point out under which law you can compel me to do so. I apprehend it is one of Sir James Martin's, relating to cruelty to animals. Under that Act, I shall hold you have a perfect legality for your action. The hon. member has made an accusation against an hon. member of the Opposition with regard to the case before the Supreme Court; that was characteristic of the fellow's cowardice.

Mr. SPEAKER: I have several times appealed to the hon. member not to persist in using offensive epithets towards any hon. member. The hon. member is now repeating his conduct, and I must ask the hon. member to at once withdraw the expression he has used.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: It would be to the benefit and credit of the House if you would withdraw the hon. member.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must withdraw the expression unreservedly.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: At the same time the hon. member remains, and it is the duty of the Speaker to remove all offensive things, and if he did so he would have no hesitation in removing the hon. member for Northumberland. The hon. member brought a charge against an hon. member, and he knows this hon. member will not rise up in self-defence.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: Hear, hear.

Other hon. members: Hear hear.

Mr. LUSCOMBE said that he did not know any such thing.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: The hon. member has usurped the functions of the House. No other hon. member belonging to this House but he would have attempted to make a charge of this character when the case was pending in the Supreme Court. (Hear, hear.) That knave, cur, and fool, whom the constituency of Northumberland has chosen to represent them—

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member is grossly out of order. Those epithets are indefensible, and are also an insult to the House. The hon. member must unreservedly withdraw the expressions and apologise for having used them.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: I am willing to apologise for anything and everything, and apologise for the presence of the hon. member for Northumberland, and I cannot imagine that humiliation can farther go than for me to have to apologise for the mere presence of such an individual.

Mr. SPEAKER: These attacks are of such a personal character they are an insult to the intelligence of the House, and must not be tolerated. The hon. member must now, without another word, withdraw the expressions, and apologise to the House; and I must warn him that if this conduct is persisted in, some course of action other than that I have indicated must be taken.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR again rose to address the House, and was interrupted by cries of "Chair, chair."

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: The chair be damned.

Hon. Members: Chair, chair.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: But the hon. member began applauding.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must not dictate to the chair. The hon. member without one further remark or explanation must withdraw the term he has used, and then must address an apology to the House.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: But, Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the term is. What is the term? (Cries chair, chair.)

Mr. SPEAKER: I can allow this to go no further, and I must call upon the leader of the House to take steps to prevent disorder in this House. Such proceedings as have taken place are likely to draw the House into a state of chaos. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. DIBBS: I have listened with great pain to the explanation of the hon. member, and I will make the necessary formal motion to preserve order. By the new rules the hon. member must either apologise to the House or be named. I think the language used is such a violation of decency that the Speaker has no other course than to name the hon. member. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must at once and unreservedly apologise to this Chair and to this House for the language he has used. The language is, "The chair be damned." Unless he withdraws it, and in the fullest manner, it will be my duty, although it will be a great pain to me to act upon the Standing Orders of the House and adopt a course that will not be pleasant to any hon. member.

A short pause ensued.

Mr. SPEAKER: Is it the intention of the hon. member to withdraw the term and apologise for it?

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: What is the term? (Cries: Chair, chair.)

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must withdraw the term and apologise to the Chair, and to the House for having used the term. Unless he does so I have only one course of action to pursue.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: I have no hesitation whatever in withdrawing that term. I will unreservedly withdraw it, and I say it was not the term I was first called upon to withdraw. I withdraw the term, and apologise to those whom it may affect.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must apologise to the House.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: I apologise to the House, and go further and apologise to all whom it may affect.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member must apologise unreservedly.

Mr. A. G. TAYLOR: I have apologised to the House, and gone further.

Mr. SPEAKER: I am sure that the hon. member must see that he is invading the ruling of the chair.

The question that the House do now adjourn was negatived—60 hon. members voting against the motion, and no one sitting on the side of the "ayes."

PETITION.

Mr. SEE presented a petition signed by 42 winegrowers resident in the Clarence River district, praying for the amendment of certain portions of the Licensing Act, so as to allow them on payment of £1 a year license fee, to sell wine wholesale and retail, under fewer restrictions than are at present imposed on them.

The petition was read and received.

CROWN LANDS BILL.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole to further consider the Crown Lands Bill.

The clause under debate was No. 82, subsection 11., line 16. "The rent shall in all cases be determined by the land court after appraisement by the local land board, which shall conduct all appraisements in the prescribed manner. The yearly rent in the western division shall not be less than 2d. per acre, in the central division not less than 3d. per acre, and in the eastern division not less than 2d. per acre"—in which Mr. Lyne had moved,—"That all the words after the word 'manner' be omitted, with a view to insert in lieu thereof the words. 'The rents shall be determined every five years, according to the area of the pastoral holding, and shall be calculated upon the carrying capacity of the pastoral holding, at a rate of not less than 4d. per annum on the average acreage necessary to carry one sheep, or at 2s. 6d. on the average acreage necessary to carry one head of cattle. Provided that in no case shall more than 10 acres be estimated for each head of sheep, or the equivalent in cattle.'" He said that we wanted to get as good a rent as possible for the Crown lands of the colony, and no better means could be adopted than those of classifying them according to their stock-carrying capabilities. If the people got from £800,000 to £1,000,000 every year, they might be very well satisfied. He had proposed in his amendment a better mode of obtaining a fair revenue according to the quality of the land that was leased than the Government propose at the present time. He had heard it said that he did not propose any minimum in his amendment, that his proposition left it open to an assessor to fix what rent he thought fit. That was not so, for a minimum was fixed, and that minimum was contained in this way: "Provided that in no case shall more than ten acres be estimated for each head of sheep, or the equivalent in cattle." If the Government proposition were carried, there was a clause in this bill which provided that a lessee dissatisfied could appeal. But if an appeal came before the Minister, upon what ground would it be allowed or disallowed? Suppose an assessor were sent on to a run for the purpose of finding out whether the land were worth 2d. an acre less or more, what basis would that assessor take to find out what the rent would be? Must he not find out the carrying capacity of the land? That was the only ground upon which he could go. If the minimum were reduced below 2d., it must be done on the stock-carrying capacity of the run; and what better method could be adopted than that of at once doing what would have to be done in the case of an appeal? He estimated that there were about 153,000,000 acres from which we could expect to derive a revenue. That 153,000,000 at 4d. per head, estimating that it took, all through, three acres to carry one sheep, would make £833,000 per year rent. [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: Rubbish.] Increasing the amount per head to 6d., it would return something like £1,200,000. [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: And at 3s., £2,000,000; it's rubbish.] That would be rubbish, no doubt. The average yield from sheep in the western and a great part of the central portion of this colony was about 3s. per head. If you took 4d. per head on the sheep it was a ninth of the gross return received from the sheep, and it seemed to him that was as much as any stockowner could be expected to pay to the revenue. He did not wish in any way to propose an amendment that would relieve the lessees from bearing a fair share of the burden that should be imposed upon them. But he wished to see that burden adjusted by a certain means of classification. As he had always held in regard to the lands of the colony, the great mistake the hon. member for Mudgee (Sir John Robertson) made in 1861 was in not classifying the land. If the hon. member had done so, he ventured to think the agitation which had taken place against the hon. member's bill would never have been what it had been. Even if we had classification of lands now it would be a good thing, and that was one of the weak points of this bill. But the only means he saw now of classifying the lands was by taxing the stock as he proposed.

Mr. LUSCOMBE said the only reason, if one were required, to induce the House to reject this amendment would be the fact that all methods the Government had adopted of sending assessors into the country to ascertain what the runholders should pay for their runs had been an utter failure. As to the amount of rent to be paid, he considered that instead of 2d. or 3d., as proposed, it should be 6d. or 1s., and the country would be the gainer by it. Even as it was, the people did not take up the land. If there was a clause in the bill at all that was good it was this one, providing that the income of the country should be stated at so much per acre, and he trusted the committee would not depart from that rule.

Mr. FARNELL remarked that the amendment was to fix the rent throughout the colony at the same amount in all three divisions; and it was proposed to make the rental one-fortieth of a penny more than the minimum under the present law. This proposal was not a fair one. He admitted that the minimum did not fix the rate, but it was none the less necessary to fix a minimum in order to get a fair rental. If they could get persons who were capable of appraising these runs, it would not matter if they had no minimum at all; but as they had not been able to do this it was necessary to fix a minimum. With this minimum of 2-5d. proposed by the amendment there would be a lease of five years, with the right for anybody to take up land out of the run. Was a lease secured for 15 years not worth more than a lease for five years, with the right of selection of any portion of the land? The bill as it stood secured 20 years, and yet it was proposed to have a minimum rent of 2-5ths of a penny for the 20 years. It was undeniable that the fixed tenure for the longer period was the more valuable as against the five years, with the possibility of selection. Security of tenure for 20 years was worth a higher minimum than 2-5ths of a penny per acre. A long lease would encourage people to lay out capital, and enable them to amass that capital in the first place. This was what was aimed at, and in consideration of the long tenure they should receive a fair rental for the land. The hon. member had said that while the clause provided for an appeal to the local court, if the appeal was found to have been made without just ground the runs ought to be forfeited. This was too severe a thing altogether. It would be sufficient that a fair decision should be given on the matter of the appeal. The hon. member had taken the worst possible cases in order to support his view, whereas they should take a minimum of the average. He was opposed to the amendment on the broad ground that they should receive a fair equivalent for the land, under the advantages offered by the bill in a long and fixed tenure.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said that the spirit of the amendment was to fix the rent on an improper basis. Surely it was possible to fix the rent on a proper basis. By the present law the rent was fixed having regard to the quality of the land, the number of stock it would carry, and other circumstances. The amendment passed these matters over altogether. He objected, therefore, to the principle of the amendment, although he did not differ so much as regards the amount of rent proposed.

Mr. QUIN objected to any high rent being imposed. He went on to speak of homestead leases, and remarked that the Government would require to exercise considerable care and attention in regard to their distribution, otherwise a few men would be coming in and obtaining the pick of the land of the colony, and the land which was remaining would be allowed to be overrun with rabbits, or go to waste in some other way.

Mr. BARBOUR said that he considered the fixing of the rent of Crown lands one of the most important matters that could engage their attention. It had been said on all hands that sufficient revenue had not been obtained from our lands, and the present bill proposed to cope with this question. He considered that the bill was most liberal in the matter of tenures, which it granted of long duration, inasmuch as it allowed leases in some instances to run for 23 years altogether. This, he considered, would encourage people to settle on the land and improve it in every way. They would then be in a position to pay a fair rental for their land. The selector paid a shilling for the land he selected and 2d. an acre for his lease, which lasted for five years, with a right of renewal for five years, which made the period 10 years. Selectors would willingly pay 3d. an acre for a 20 or 23 years' lease. If the lease to the pastoral tenants were for 20 years the rental should be less than for 20 years. It was said that the rent should be estimated according to the carrying capacity of the land, as it was in Victoria. The system in Victoria was one by which a shilling per sheep was charged, and here it was proposed that the amount should be 4d. In Victoria, also, the tenure was only from year to year. Look at the difference between this and a tenure for 15 or 23 years, as proposed here. In Victoria the sum realised by rent from the pastoral tenant was a penny and a third per acre. There, too, the best of the land was gone. If Victoria yielded an income of a penny and a third per acre, surely a lease of land much superior in quality here, a lease for 20 years, should pay at least 2d. That was his opinion, and in advocating the clause in the bill he did not think that the pastoral tenants were asked to pay too much. He should support the bill as it stood.

Mr. WILSON said he must contradict some of the arguments of the hon. member. In a recent number of the Argus appeared an article on the proposal of our Government to increase the rent. It advocated the extension of tenures and the reduction of rentals, so that tenants might feel encouraged to remain on the ground and keep the rabbits off. Victoria had mismanaged her mallee country, and had finally been compelled to accept a reduced rental for it. The hon. the Minister for Lands must see the importance of dealing with the rabbit pest in the western division at once, or it would become a national calamity. It seemed to him that the Minister for Lands had not touched the gist of this matter at all. He himself had already expressed his conviction that the pastoral tenant should pay well if he did well. Land should pay according to its stock-carrying capability, and he agreed in this with the hon. member for the Hume, whose amendment was a great improvement on the clause. He did not understand what the Minister for Lands meant by "minimum of averages." This part of the bill came more within the Department of the Minister for Mines than the Minister for Lands, and while remarking upon this portion of the bill he did not lose sight of the Rabbit Act, and the assessment under that Act. The Minister for Lands had failed to perceive that a great deal of capital had been expended on the bulk of the leaseholds in the western district for which there had been no adequate return. He would have great pleasure in supporting this amendment, and if it were not carried he would be prepared to move another.

Mr. GARRETT thought this amendment concerned the most important point the committee had yet touched upon in this bill. It had been considered that a lessee should be given a permanent lease of one part of his run for a fixed period, but on the other hand the lessee was to be called upon to pay a largely increased rental. Taking that as a statement of the case, he would be bound to vote against the amendment moved by the hon. member for the Hume, because it did not propose to bring about any appreciable increase in the present rentals derived from pastoral lands, and it did not afford the means of eventually getting that increase. Under the present law the leases were taken up in blocks of five miles square containing 25 miles, which was 16,000 acres. The leaseholders were bound to keep the computation of the carrying capability of the leases to that fixed by statute, which was 4000 sheep, and that was 160 sheep to each section; but by the hon. member's amendment a leaseholder would be only compelled to keep 64 sheep to the section. Then the effect of the amendment from a money point of view, taking the minimum given by the hon. member, was simply this: the legal minimum fixed by the present law, except in the case of the first 10 years of a leasehold—that was from the original issue of the lease—the first issued by the Government—except in that case, where the minimum was 10s. per section, the legal minimum fixed by the present law was £1 per section. Now, what was the magnificent increase the amendment would give the country in exchange for fixity of tenure, the vast privileges conferred on the lessee by this bill, and the immense restrictions placed upon everybody who desired to go on the public lands, all of which told in favour of the lessee's holding? We were to get 1s. 4d. per section extra. If the House agreed to this amendment it would violate the understanding and agreement practically made between this House and the country, that in exchange for fixity of tenure on part of the runs a substantial rent should be obtained. (Cheers.) Having said so much, he did not think it worth while to say any more about the amendment, except that it threw us back on that rotten, unreliable, unsatisfactory system of appraisement—(hear, hear)—to a greater extent than the bill itself did; a system that had been condemned by one Administration after another, and by Parliament after Parliament. The Minister for Lands had been very vigorous and emphatic in expressing his opinion upon the amendment, but he had not stated what the Government were going to do with their own clause. (Hear, hear.) We had had so much backing and filling about the Government proposals in this measure heretofore—there had been so much uncertainty and such doubtful feelings on the part of the Government up to the present, that unless he had a clear expression of opinion he felt no confidence in anticipating any particular result from the Government proposals. He would like to know from the Minister whether he intended to adhere to the clause as it was, because hon. members, if they referred to this amendment, would find it was one not to omit the Minister's words, but to insert other words which, if inserted, would lead to the expulsion of the Minister's words; and he thought the Minister ought to have stated whether he intended to propose any modification of the terms of rental he had proposed in this bill. The other evening, without any notice whatever, without being asked to do it by any member of the House, or by any section of the members of the House, or by anyone in the press or on the platform or on the hustings, the Minister had voluntarily proposed a reduction of the prelease rents from 3d. to 2d. He would like to know what effect that was going to have on the proposals embodied in the clause before the committee. Certainly he did not see how the charge of 3d. per acre could be maintained in the central division, whilst 2d. only per acre was charged on conditional purchases, which were the pick of the country, and which carried with them the right of purchase, and many other advantages. The leaseholder was barred from purchase, and yet they would charge him 3d. an acre, while the amount charged with the right of taking the pick of the land was only 2d. If they reduce the central division to 2d. they would have to make a proportionate reduction in the other divisions to 1½d. or less. But they could not pursue this question any further without knowing absolutely what were the proposals that the Government intended to stand by with regard to these rentals. This should be declared. The amendment of the hon. member for the Hume was practically out of the debate; but bad as it was, it might be better than the Government proposal. This was not wholly a lessees' measure, but had been talked of since this House was elected as being the backbone of our revenue system. But where would they get the revenue? Out of the pockets of the people. There could be no doubt that the land rentals were the source of income relied upon; but he did not believe in the principle of wringing deficiencies from the rentals. It would be evident that the hon. member's amendment would not be agreed to, and therefore they were brought face to face with the proposals of the Government, and had reason to demand a clear statement as to what the Government intended to do with their own clause.

Mr. LUSCOMBE said that the object of the prelesses was to settle human beings on the land, and not sheep and cattle, and they were therefore determined on a different basis from the provisions by which land was given to the squatters.

Mr. STEPHEN said the speech of the hon member for Camden had destroyed the very stronghold of the amendment proposed by the hon. member for the Hume, which he (Mr. Stephen) had been ready to support; but he desired particularly at this stage to ascertain from the Government what they intended to do as regarded the reduction.

Mr. FARNELL said that when the amendment was disposed of, he would have much pleasure in informing them what the Government intended to do.

Mr. SUTTOR thought that such a statement coming from the Minister for Lands was of an unsatisfactory character. He considered that the Government should fully explain their intention in the matter before the committee went any further. He held that the system of fixing the rent according to the grazing capabilities of the land was the proper one to adopt, and he would therefore vote for the amendment proposed by the hon. member for the Hume. If too high a rent were imposed, most of the land from which the Government were now receiving a fair revenue would be thrown up. He therefore thought that every caution should be exercised in this matter.

Mr. R. BARTON said that if the minimum rent had been £1 per section for land in the western district, it would not have been stocked or occupied. If they put twopence an acre on the land it would tend to an enormous quantity of country being thrown on the hands of the Government, and to large quantities remaining unimproved. It was absurd to compare the rental in Victoria with what might be charged here in respect of the carrying capacity of the land. They must have due regard to the rainfall being very light and the droughts severe in this district. He had one of the best runs there, and could not keep more than one sheep to four acres on it, and during the present drought he had lost half his stock—in fact, sheep had died in thousands there. There was no more chance of 10,000-acre blocks being taken up in the district than there was of the Minister giving leases for land in the moon. The Minister had made the astounding proposal that they should charge the minimum of the average. What that was only the intelligence of the Minister could tell. If the clause were passed the Minister could not charge less than the minimum rent indicated, in which case a great number of runs would be vacated. If there were a division on it he would vote for the amendment. He approved of the principle that the rent should be fixed according to the carrying capacity of the land. He did not approve of the amendment altogether, because, besides the principle it contained, there were other matters which ought to be considered, such as the position of runs, their distance from market, and formation of the country.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said that he was surprised at seeing hon. members who had backed up the bill all through act differently with regard to this clause. The amendment before the committee would change the whole aspect of the matter, and, however much it was debated, all that hon. members had to do was to vote for or against it; and he should vote against it. He had listened to a number of speeches, and there had been a lot of misstatements put forward all round. Even his hon. friend the Secretary for Lands and the ex-Minister for Lands, Mr. Garrett, had misrepresented the minimum. The minimum was 10s., and not £1. His hon. friend said that it was the law that a run should carry so many cattle and sheep. Where was that law? Under the law of 1861 they threw all the country open at £10 a year for blocks of four miles square, but with an assessment which amounted to £20 more. With regard to the dry country, they allowed pastoral tenants to have four times the amount of land, that was 10 miles square for the same money. Even then some of the people who took up runs on these terms in the arid country found that they could not afford to pay £10 and the assessment, and millions of acres were forfeited. If Parliament put high rents on this country they would have no rents at all to collect. Hon. members seemed to think that because that arid country was good there ought to be a high rent upon it; but if they did this they would not have any occupation of it at all. His hon. friend the Secretary for Lands had, he was afraid, been bamboozled by the wretched report of Messrs. Morris and Rankin. [Mr. FARNELL: No, no.] Let him look through it again, and see how different it was from what Mr. Rankin said of the country now. He had been over the arid country lately, and 45 acres to a sheep was about what he said now the carrying capacity was. His hon. friend should employ intelligent officers, gentlemen who knew something of the interior of the country, to act as commissioners of Crown lands. He himself had no confidence in the local boards, but thought that the Minister should employ good appraisers to fix the rentals. He should have been disposed to let the land at a very low rent, in which case we should be pretty sure of getting our rents; but he was afraid the course now proposed would result in putting a large amount of land out of occupation.

Mr. LUSCOMBE said that the squatting members seemed unanimous in throwing obloquy upon him, and that in undervaluing the lands of the colony they were only doing now what they had always done.

Mr. POOLE said that he was surprised to hear the hon. member, Sir John Robertson, say that he should vote against the amendment. He himself thought that we should endeavour to obtain a fair and equitable rent for our lands. He would have no hesitation in voting against the amendment. At the same time he did not wish to see a rental fixed upon the lands which would be a barrier to their use.

Mr. FLETCHER said he was one of those who held to the view that the rental of the land should be fixed upon its capacity to carry sheep. He believed in the principle of the amendment, but he thought the minimum too low. He was of opinion that if the amendment were passed we should get a smaller return than we did now; but even if we got a larger rental would it be equal to the advantages arising from fixity of tenure? What we wanted to do was to fix upon a rental, which would enable the squatter to live, and give us a fair rental for the land occupied. That being his opinion, he was in favour of taxing the carrying capacity of a run, but he could not vote for the amendment before the committee, because he did not consider that it proposed a fair rental for the squatters to pay.

Mr. LACKEY said that any hon. member who desired to act with undue severity towards anyone or any class occupying the lands was no friend of the community. The question that was now under consideration was a very important one. It was unaccountable to him how they could fix an arbitrary rate for all stations alike, in different parts of the country. The amendment moved by Mr. Lyne was more equitable than that of the Government. It was inequitable to charge the same rental for a station on the Lower Macquarie as for one in the direction of Cobar. By the valuation system, the rentals could be fixed in proportion to the quality of the soil; the climate and other considerations differing in different localities. There was no analogy between the positions of the new beginners on the back blocks and those engaged in the middle districts, and it was here that the inequitable character of the arbitrary fixed rental was apparent. He hoped a settlement would be brought about in a way that would do justice on all sides. He cited instances from Mr. Rankin's report showing the extreme variety of circumstances affecting the producing powers of the soil. It would be most injudicious to fix the rental at a specific sum for all localities; and would lead to very undesirable results. The whole community was affected by this question, and therefore they should deal with it with the general welfare of the colony in view, as well as the just treatment of those actually engaged upon the land.

Mr. LOUGHNAN held that the only way of getting at an approximate idea of the classification of runs was by an appraisement according to their grazing capabilities. He would therefore vote in favour of the amendment submitted by the hon. member Mr. Lyne.

Mr. BURDEKIN said that he would oppose the amendment in the interests of the general public, as the revenue derivable from the land would be greatly decreased if it were carried.

Mr. WILKINSON spoke in favour of the amendment.

Mr. W. R. CAMPBELL said that if the amendment were carried the Government could not go on with the bill, for it would alter the whole style and complexion of it. He maintained that hon. members had deprecated the value of runs in the district most inordinately. Not long since it was alleged that the runs were so valuable that a railway must be made to them. The rent proposed in the clause was a very fair one, and to say that runs would be abandoned because it was too high was unreasonable.

Mr. M'CULLOCH intended to vote for the amendment because it would lead to a fair rent being obtained from their land. He would, however, have liked the sum to be sixpence rather than fourpence; or it might be graduating according to the distance of runs from railway stations.

Mr. HUMPHREY said that the amendment was not likely to be carried, inasmuch as it provided for an irregular kind of assessment, and he would recommend Mr. Lyne to withdraw it in order that another might be moved which the committee would probably accept. He approved of the principle contained in it, but he did not think it would be agreed to by the committee. He wished himself that the assessment should be sixpence per sheep, and be applied to the whole area of the runs.

After some remarks from Mr. GRIFFITHS,

Mr. LYNE said that he must take exception to the distorted manner in which certain hon. members had put his amendment before the committee. If this were carried we would have a principle of regular assessment all over the colony, as indeed must ultimately be the case. It seemed evident that many members of the committee, while expressing their approval of the principle of the amendment, would not vote for it. If the committee had no objection he would withdraw the amendment. (An hon. member objected.)

The amendment was negatived without division.

Mr. FARNELL moved that the clause be amended so as to make the yearly rent in the western division not less than 1d. instead of 2d. per acre and he explained that he intended also to move that the clause be further amended by making the yearly rent in the central division not less than 1½d. instead of 3d. per acre. The rent in the eastern division would remain as it was stated in the clause.

Mr. LYNE said the Minister was making a minimum that would bring ruin on hundreds of lessees, but he could see that the House was determined to ruin them.

Mr. GARRETT hoped that now the Minister for Lands had stated the Government proposals he would give the House time to consider them. At this hour of the morning it would be indecent to proceed to debate this question.

Mr. FARNELL thought the Government were justified in making the proposal in the amendment he had moved, and could see no reason for an adjournment.

Mr. SUTTOR said they had all along been debating and voting on the understanding that the rents would be higher, and now it was proposed, without one word of explanation, to reduce the revenue by one-half. They should have time to consider this question.

Mr. GARRARD said it was not the case that the Government were giving up half they had asked for. It was true that they were reducing the minimum, but if the runs were worth the money, they would be appraised accordingly, and the amount would be paid. A good case had been made out for the reduction of the minimum to meet a few special cases, but that did not prevent their taking a higher rental from those lands that could pay it.

Mr. SPRING said they did not give up one-half the revenue, but only that portion that would apply to particular leases placed at the minimum of 2d. The reduction of the minimum did not necessitate the reduction of the rent. The 104th clause provided that the minimum could be altered, so that the decision on the present question would not be final. The minimum of 1d. was low enough, and then the 104th clause could be eliminated altogether. The amendment proposed by the Government should be adopted.

Mr. W. R. CAMPBELL, speaking in favour of the amendment proposed by the Minister, urged that the western division should not be rated at about 50 per cent. less than the eastern and central divisions. He thought they might postpone the consideration of the question.

Mr. BARBOUR again expressed his hope that the Government would adhere to the principle contained in the clause.

After some remarks from Mr. ABBOTT, Mr. BRUNKER, and Mr. FLETCHER,

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said that the effect of this, if passed, would be to reduce our sheep one third, and replace them with rabbits.

Mr. DAY said that this western district contained some of the best land in the colony, and should be charged as much as leased land in the eastern or central districts.

Mr. W. R. CAMPBELL said that if the central division was so much better than the eastern and the western ones, leaseholders there should be charged more than 2d.

The amendment was agreed to, on division by 52 votes to 3.

Mr. FARNELL moved that the blank in the line 19 be filled by the words "three halfpence."

Mr. BRUNKER desired to move that the amendment be amended so as to make the amount 1d. instead of a 1½d.

Sir P. A. JENNINGS thought it would be a reasonable thing for the Minister for Lands to withdraw his amendment and allow Mr. Brunker to move that which he had suggested.

Mr. FARNELL hoped hon. members would consent to the amendment he had moved.

Mr. GARRETT asked if the Minister for Lands could state the average rentals at the present time produced in the Central division. He believed the average rental was not up to the minimum now proposed.

Mr. BURDEKIN said that the Central division possessed many advantages over the Western division.

After some remarks from Mr. YOUNG and Mr. W. A. CAMPBELL, the question that the blank in line 19 be filled with the words "three halfpence," was put, and agreed to on division by 44 votes to 9.

The words "one penny" were inserted in the next line of the sub-section.

The CHAIRMAN then left the chair, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again.

OYSTER FISHERIES BILL.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the Legislative Council's amendments in the Oyster Fisheries Bill. All the amendments were agreed to with the exception of the alteration of length of notice to owners of private property, which, having been altered by the Council from 30 to 90 days, was now altered by the Assembly to 60 days.

The chairman then left the chair, and reported the bill to the House, with an amendment. The report was adopted.

At six minutes past 2 o'clock the House adjourned to 4 o'clock on Wednesday.

NEW NOTICES OF MOTION.

Mr. Buchanan to move,—That there be laid upon the table of this House a copy of the petition of Mr. Joachim to the Governor, in reference to his selections.

Mr. Garrett to move,—That there be laid upon the table of this House a return showing:—1. The number of sidings put in by the Government, at the instance of private individuals, on the respective lines of Government railways. 2. The terms upon which such sidings have been put in; and, where guarantees have been given, the cases in which the guarantors have failed to fulfil the terms and conditions of their respective guarantees.

Mr. Trickett to move,—That leave of absence, on account of ill-health, be granted to Robert Butcher, Esq., one of the members for Paddington, for three weeks from this date.

TUESDAY, JULY 8.

Contingent Notices of Motions, on the question "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply or Ways and Means:—

Mr. Buchanan to move,—That, in the event of any member calling attention to the presence of strangers in the House, the Speaker or Chairman of Committees, as the case may be, shall thereupon put the question, without debate, and on a division, if a majority vote to exclude strangers, strangers shall be excluded accordingly.

Mr. Buchanan to move,—1. That, in the opinion of this House, and in view of the present deficit of one million sterling, a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem should be imposed upon all goods imported into this country. 2. That the above resolution be communicated by address to his Excellency the Governor.

Mr. Buchanan to move,—1. That, in the opinion of this House a duty of 1d. per lb. be imposed upon all beef and mutton exported from this country. 2. That the above resolution be communicated by address to his Excellency the Governor.

Mr. Buchanan to move,—1. That, in the opinion of this House, in consideration of the large number of unemployed people in the country, it would be inconsiderate and cruel to spend any portion of the £50,000 voted for immigration in bringing more people here to swell the ranks of the unemployed, and to land the people thus introduced in beggary and misery. 2. That, in the best interests of this country, and in the opinion of this House, no further money should be spent by the State in bringing people to this country, but that the £50,000 should be expended in giving bonuses to the originators and starters of new industries, and so promote the employment and well-being of the people. 3. That the above resolutions be communicated by address to his Excellency the Governor.

Mr. Abigail to move,—That, in the opinion of this House, no liability should be incurred on account of assisted immigration beyond the £50,000 voted for 1883 until authorised by a vote of this House.

RAILWAY TO SILVERTON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The information to hand from the region of the Barrier Ranges justifies the assumption that we are about to develop an Australian Nevada upon our western border. The people of Victoria and South Australia are already on the alert to take advantage of the rush of population to the vicinity of Silverton, and we now hear of a proposed railway from Terowie to the South Australian border, while the merchants and business men of Melbourne are making gigantic preparations to gain the trade of the large population which will in a few months be settled in the neighbourhood of the newly discovered silver-mines. The territory in which these mines are situated forms a portion of New South Wales, and we ought therefore to have a fair share of the profits to be derived from them. If we want to accomplish this by an ordinary road, however, as proposed by Mr. Dibbs, I fear we shall never succeed. If once the traffic sets in towards Melbourne or Adelaide, we may rest assured that it will continue to flow in that direction, because our greatest distance from the mines will place Sydney at a great disadvantage in the competition for the trade.

What is needed to place us in possession of the field is the immediate construction of a railway from Bourke right through to Silverton. A survey has already been made of the route as far as Wilcannia, and a light railway, such as those which run over some of the prairie lands of the United States, could be constructed in almost as short a time as the road proposed by Mr. Dibbs. There is plenty of labour available for the work, and with about 3000 men on the ground the Government could construct a light line almost as soon as the surveyors had finished their work. The American overland route in many parts was built at the rate of a mile a day by a private company, and there is no reason why our Government could not eclipse this performance, considering the difference in the character of the countries with which they would have to deal. For a great national work, such as this would be, it would be justifiable to sell a million acres of land, and devote the proceeds to the undertaking. If we deprived posterity of their right to this land we would leave them a more valuable asset in the shape of a main line of railway to Adelaide. Pending the receipt of the proceeds of these sales, the Government could raise a sufficient amount by issuing Treasury bills. Such a work as the one I have indicated would solve the vexed problems of the unemployed, by giving a remunerative employment to thousands of men now idle. By making a vigorous push enough sleepers and rails could be obtained for the work in a few months, and a strong body of surveyors could be got together quickly by liberal inducements being offered them. We are already running a railway to Hay at a loss in order to keep the trade of Riverina in our hands, and the country willingly submits to the loss, as I am sure it would do in the case of Silverton. The silver ore could easily be treated at Lithgow if the proper appliances were located there, and we might thus do something to aid in developing the future Birmingham of Australia. South Australia will never be able to compete with us in the matter of smelting, for the simple reason that she has no coal resources. Mr. Dibbs has here a splendid chance to retrieve his reputation, and the whole colony would back him in his endeavour to checkmate Victoria and South Australia in their efforts to secure the trade of Silverton.

I am, &c., E. W. O'SULLIVAN.

FROM WILCANNIA TO THACKARINGA.

In his report to Mr. W. B. Henderson, Superintendent of Drills, Mines Department, Mr. J. Wright furnishes some useful information relative to the water supply on the route from Wilcannia to Thackaringa. We condense the following particulars from the report:—Four miles from Wilcannia there is a large dry lake which is filled by the river Darling when in flood, and two wells have been sunk in the vicinity to a depth of 35 feet, but the water is too salt for use. Six miles further on, opposite the home station at Natallie, a well has been put down to a depth of 104 feet, the water from which is poisonous. There is also a tank at the station nearly full of water, and a small tank three-quarters of a mile nearer Wilcannia, and close to the road, but with little water in it. The country, so far, is nearly flat, without surface water, and timber only fit for firing. Twelve miles further on there is another tank near the road, with very little water in it. Eight miles from there are two wells known as "Cawker's Wells," which give a supply of 800 gallons per hour of good water for stock. These wells are 135 feet deep. There is also a small tank, the water from which is used for drinking purposes. The country hereabouts is flat, and waterless on the surface, with timber only fit for firewood. Eight miles from Cawker's wells close to the road is a large tank, situated in a watercourse with a good supply. There are some low hills on both sides of the tank. Twelve miles further on there is another tank, known as the "Adelaide Tank." One and a-half mile off the road there is the "Adelaide Well," yielding 30 gallons of water per hour. Three miles from the "Adelaide Tank" a shaft has been put down 35 feet, but no impression could be made in the rock with the augers. From the Adelaide Tank to this shaft, the country is hilly and stony, with timber thick in places. Seven miles from this place there is a large tank full of water, situated a little distance off the road. Nine miles further on is Glenlyon station. There are numerous creeks about, but the water apparently will not last long. At the home station there is a well which watered 20,000 sheep for some time and then drained out. There is a large tank close by full of water, with engine and pumping gear connected with it. There is another tank similar to this one at the back of and about one mile distant from the station. Five miles further on, but off the road, is a tank full of water. From the station to Bourke's Well the road runs over low, lightly timbered hills. This well is 10 miles from the station. There is only soakage water in it, and but a poor supply. 150 yards from this well is a second, but it is dry. Four miles from here is a large tank full of water. The road after this passes through a dense scrub for a few miles, and then over an open plain to Yelcowanie Creek, 20 miles from the last tank, where there is a little water. Seven miles from the crossing of the creek there is a well with good water for stock. Nineteen miles further on, and four miles off the road to the left, is a well on Stephen's Creek (a gum creek) which will water about 10,000 sheep. Seven miles further on at the crossing of Stephen's Creek is a well which will water 2000 sheep, and one and a-half mile down the creek is another well which will water 4000, and water is lying in the creek. A change of country comes on now from here to Silverton, being more or less hilly, some of the hills being very steep. Mount Darling Well is three miles from the crossing of Stephen's Creek and two miles off the coach road; will water 2000 sheep. Broken Hill Well, six miles south-east from Mount Gipps Hotel, has little water, but good. About two miles nearer Silverton there is a small lagoon, full of water, but Mr. Wright does not think it will last. Two miles from this lagoon the road crosses and leaves Stephen's Creek, and seven miles further crosses the Nine Mile Creek, where soakage water might be got after rain. Eight miles from Silverton, off the coach road, is a large tank full of water. At Silverton there are several wells. In one well there is good water, and 90 yards away there is another, the water in which is not fit for use because of its saltness. About four miles from Silverton, on the present coach road to Thackaringa, there is a large tank half full, and the catches full of water. From Silverton to Primrose's the country is hilly; thence to the South Australian border flat and open, with a little water lying in the crabholes. There are two tanks close to the hotel at Thackaringa, and a tank one and a-half mile on the watercourse to the left of the road, all full of water; and near the South Australian border is a large tank belonging to that Government.

A CURIOUS BEQUEST.—According to a writer in Cornhill, "Harriet Martineau, chancing to be in London, consulted Mr. Toynbee, the aurist, upon her ailment. He did her little or no good, but was very kind and gracious to her, which, it not being a usual habit with him, as I have heard, made a great impression upon her. She was so pleased, indeed, with the interest he had taken in her case that she resolved to leave him, by testamentary bequest, her ears. She announced this intention in the presence of Mr. Shepherd, who observed, 'But, my dear madam, you can't do that: it will make your other legacy worthless.' The fact was, in the interests of science, Miss Martineau had already left her head to the Phrenological Society. 'Oh,' he said, the doctor how he came to know that. 'Oh,' he said, 'she told me so herself; she has left £10 in her codicil to me for cutting it off.' There was nothing, of course, improper in such a bequest, but it was certainly very unusual; and I never afterwards felt quite comfortable, even at cribbage, in the society of the testatrix and her doctor. I don't think I could play cribbage with the lady upon whom I had undertaken to perform such an operation; but then I am neither a philosopher nor a man of science. As it happened, the doctor died before his patient, who subsequently altered her intentions altogether. I never, at least, heard of their being carried out."

DEPUTATION.

THE SECULARISTS' ASSOCIATION.

Yesterday a deputation, consisting of Messrs. W. Walker, F. Jones, H. L. Summerfield, W. F. Johnson, F. Finch, H. W. Chapman, E. E. Burnes, C. Probyn, J. Williams, J. W. Smith, and N. Griffiths, representing the Secularists' Association, were introduced to the Minister of Public Instruction by Mr. Copeland, M.L.A., with reference to religious instruction in Public schools.

Mr. COPELAND said that the deputation were there to place their views before the Minister on the education question, and he presumed the object was to deal with anything that might have been said by the deputation that waited upon the Minister last Friday. He had no doubt they would be able to give full expression to their opinions, and personally he might say he felt sure their task would not be a very heavy one. He expressed his entire confidence in the ground taken up by the Minister last week, and as far as his individual opinions were concerned, he felt it to be unnecessary to express his views on the subject. He felt sure that Mr. Trickett would carry out the Act in its integrity, and he presumed that the views of the deputation were the same as his own, namely, that they did not desire to see the Act tampered with but left as it was, and the deputation were as much entitled to place their views before the Minister as the clergymen who visited him last week.

Mr. WALKER said that the deputation would not have waited upon the Minister had it not been that the Protestant and other sectarian bodies had moved in this matter, whose real desire was to make the education of the country more sectarian and dogmatic than it was at present. The Secularists had no special grievance under the existing state of affairs, further than they thought that if one religion was allowed to be taught in Public schools by religious bodies, another religious body should be allowed to teach their particular form of religion. It might, perhaps, be known to the Minister that in the National Irish school series dogmas of every form were taught, and were read over by the children, and questions in regard to them were asked by the teachers. The teachers, he had no doubt, also had to answer questions put by the children who might be in doubt, and the Minister would perceive under this state of affairs that to whatever religious body a teacher belonged he was bound, more or less, to impart dogmas to the children. The contents of these books could not be conscientiously taught to a child by any Secularist, and, as an individual and a member of the Secularist Society, he objected to pay taxation for the support of State schools where dogmas in which they could not conscientiously believe were taught. They would not object to it so much if they were also allowed to impart their own form of religious instruction to the children. Perhaps it might be said that they were few in number, but justice did not go by a show of hands. There were people who had been few and in the minority at one time, and who yet grew into a majority, and the Minister would perceive that it might possibly be an injustice to the body represented by the deputation to ignore them, for they were as earnest, sincere, and as religious—if a wide view was taken of that term—as any other body in the community, and they came there to as for the same privileges. They would not have done so if it had not been for the action of the representatives of the religious sects. The deputation asked to permitted to give instruction to their children in at least three things—namely, the duty of the child to itself, its duty to those with whom it came into contact, and its duty to the State. Under the first head they taught personal cleanliness, regular habits, temperance, economy, industry, and the laws of health and self-preservation. Under the second head they taught courtesy, politeness, respect to their superiors, self-denial, and the cultivation of those principles that tended towards the general good of the community, in effect giving the greatest amount of happiness to the greatest number. Under the third head they taught the child to acquire a knowledge of the laws of the country in which he lived, the penalties for violation of those laws, and the rights and privileges of citizenship. Such a system comprised all that was really religious and moral. He did not think he had omitted anything, and this could be practically carried out and yet exclude dogmatic teaching. As they had to pay for religious instruction he submitted that they had a right to ask for this. As it was at present the Secularists were really debarred, for he really could not conscientiously allow his children to be taught religion in Public schools, and they were forced to be apart from the rest, and pointed at as heretics. Some of the parents, rather than allow their children to be persecuted in the Public schools, allowed them to learn what they said was a pernicious system. They only asked for the right to teach their children what they conscientiously believed, and as the State could not undertake to teach them, they claimed the same rights and privileges as other bodies, especially when they were as likely to be correct as any other religious body in the community.

Mr. JONES said that if they had not heard that the clerical gentlemen intended to fight the matter the deputation would not have thought it necessary to come to the Minister. When the deputation waited upon the Minister last Friday the Bishop of Sydney stated that in English schools the Bible was placed unreservedly in the hands of the teachers and children, and that the schools were opened with some kind of hymn and prayer. With regard to the first statement, he was positive the Bishop was wrong, and he believed he was wrong on the second point. In England the question had been as bitterly fought as here, and it had been decided that the Bible should only be read as a reading lesson without any comment whatever. There was no religious teaching there, and the Church of England schools were in existence long before the cry of education for the masses arose.

Mr. BURNES said that one hardship that their children suffered under was that, when entering State schools they were asked their religion. He never sent his children to school and told them what his religious belief was, as they were not sufficiently experienced to form any belief on the subject of religion. At present they really had no religion, but by-and-bye they would have a religion of their own. The hardship was that they had to state what religion they followed.

Mr. FINCH endorsed what had been already been stated. He always asked the teacher to allow his children to fall out of class when religious instruction was given. He did not think he should be compelled to allow his children to be taught a religion which he did not believe in himself. The Secularist Association numbered 500 persons, principally married men, and if they took each of these married men to have two or three children it would give a large figure. He did not like to accept a position in one of the Public schools, simply because it interfered with his belief.

Mr. TRICKETT: Do these gentlemen represent any special organisation?

Mr. WALKER: Yes; we represent the Secularist Association, numbering at present about 500 in round numbers.

Mr. TRICKETT: Have they any church?

Mr. WALKER: We have not; we have meeting-rooms or "gatherings," and that is really the meaning of the word church.

Mr. TRICKETT: Where are they situated?

Mr. WALKER: In Pitt-street. We have regular meetings, and on Sundays we meet in the theatre in the absence of any large hall, which we have not yet been able to obtain.

Mr. TRICKETT: Have you a clergyman?

Mr. WALKER: Of course you may put it in that way. We have representatives, which is only what the churches have. We have a Sunday school; and there is a body called the Liberal Association which is on the same principle, although a little different.

Mr. COPELAND: There are about 300 children in the Sunday school, and there is another school in course of formation.

Mr. TRICKETT said that of course he must admit that this question of secularism of the present day engaged the attention of a very large number of people, and he thought it would have been much fairer to him if, as the other deputation had done, he had received some definite information beforehand, showing what the exact object of the deputation was, because the question was a great one, requiring careful thought. There was also a weakness in the position of the deputation in coming to him at all, because if their system of religious teaching was to be recognised, he presumed that under the Public Instruction Act it was a matter for them to arrange between themselves and the teachers, and the school boards who administered the Act. It was impossible for him, particularly at that hasty interview to know what their religion consisted of. He had never gone at great depth into the question of secularism or freethought, for he presumed it was the same; and as far as the public were informed of the nature of that religion, he must say that very often it had seemed to him to have assumed rather the caricature of religion than any cogent argument. As to the question of secularism, which he supposed was identical with freethought, they were all freethinkers; but there were some freethinkers who were not secularists. There was another weak point in the position taken up by the deputation, and that was that but for the deputation which waited upon him last week the gentlemen present would not have thought it necessary to wait upon him. If there was any force in the argument that he was right in declining in any way to sanction the proposals laid before him by the other representative body, that waited upon him on Friday, to do what he thought an infringement of the Act, it seemed to him that their case had also fallen through, and for the same reason. However, it was a great subject, and he was not going to decide it at once. If the deputation liked to put their views in writing he should be happy to give them every consideration.

Mr. WALKER said that as the interview was likely to get the public, he respectfully ventured to say a few more words. The deputation could not tell the Minister their views until they saw what was done by the deputation on Friday last, and their reply to what was stated by that deputation led up to what was advanced now. In the next place, it was not possible for them to know whether the Minister at the head of the Education Department recognised them as a religious body. As the Minister, however, was of opinion that the deputation should have submitted their opinions in writing, and that he would consider them if they did so, they would not trouble him any further.

Mr. TRICKETT: At present we do not recognise you as a religious body.

Mr. WALKER: The State favoured religious teaching by the Anglican and other Churches, and the statement that the State could not undertake to teach religion is, therefore, scarcely accurate. We do not caricature religion, and would be happy to meet the Bishop of Sydney or anyone else in fair argument.

Mr. TRICKETT said he was not going to determine this great question right off the reel. There were great men in England who were freethinkers at the present day, and who were taking up this particular view of things, but as far as he had been able to study it he could not recognise it as one of the religions of the world. If, however, they would submit their leading views in writing he would give them every consideration, and forward an answer to them.

Mr. WALKER said that the Minister stated that another weak point in the position taken up was that the answers he gave to the deputation that waited upon him on Friday were reasons why the interview might have been obviated. Now the Protestant bodies, by that deputation, undertook to show their activity, and their determination to move in this matter, for the purpose, if possible, of upsetting the Act, and the present deputation desired to show a determination on their part to fight the matter through.

Mr. TRICKETT said that with regard to any attempts to upset the present Act, everybody who knew him and his principles, knew that he had always been, ever since the system was established, one of its stanchest supporters, and he was not likely to do anything that would not preserve it in its integrity.

SYDNEY HOSPITAL.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Sydney Hospital, was held in the board room at the institution yesterday afternoon. The president, Dr. Arthur Renwick, occupied the chair, and there were present—Messrs. John Pope (hon. treasurer), F. Abigail, M. Chapman, S. E. Lees, I. J. Josephson, F. Senior, J. Graham, R. B. Smith, C. J. Roberts, John Davies, S. Burdekin, John Starkey, Alexander Dean, and Drs. Mackellar, M'Kay, Clark, and Morgan. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the accounts for June amounting to £1310 18s. 10d. were passed for payment.

The following letter received from the Principal Under-Secretary was read:—"In reply to your letter of the 13th ultimo representing the inadequacy of the accommodation furnished by the Sydney Hospital for the sick poor of the city, I am directed to state for the information of the board of directors of the institution that it is the intention of the Colonial Secretary to take the necessary steps, as soon as the state of public business will permit, to bring in a bill to place the whole administration of the hospitals of the city on what he believes will be a better footing for the public generally and for the various existing hospitals individually."

The following communication received from the Principal Under-Secretary was also read:—"In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, submitting a copy of a communication from Dr. Cecil Morgan, representing the necessity for the erection of a children's ward at the ophthalmic branch hospital, and requesting the favourable consideration of the Government, I am directed to state that the Colonial Secretary thinks this is a fair case for an appeal to the public by the directors of the Sydney Hospital."

The CHAIRMAN said it was desirable to provide further accommodation at Moore Cliff for children who now had to mix with adult patients, and consequently could not be treated satisfactorily. The hospital at Moore Cliff had a name and fame throughout the whole country, and was becoming crowded with patients to such an extent that it was difficult to find sufficient accommodation. It was thought desirable, through Dr. Morgan's representations to the house committee, to represent the matter to the Colonial Secretary, and now, as Dr. Morgan had taken the necessary steps in connection with the matter, the Government, he thought, would be willing to authorise anything that might be done.

Dr. MORGAN said the present accommodation at Moorecliff was not suitable for the requirements. The structure, which was only a temporary structure, had been standing now for ten years, and it was time that something was done as there was a great risk in case of fire, and the patients also could not receive proper treatment.

Dr. MACKELLAR pointed out that they would need to consider what quantity of space was available for the erection of a ward; he thought the place had as many buildings upon it as it was calculated to hold.

Mr. DAVIES said the matter was one over which a special meeting should be called, and he thought a committee should be appointed to bring up a report in connection with it. He would move that a committee consisting of Drs. Mackellar and Morgan and the president should be appointed to deal with the matter.

Mr. CHAPMAN thought no time should be lost in connection with the matter, and that Alderman Dean, as he was a builder, should be placed on the committee.

Mr. GRAHAM said Dr. Morgan deserved their heartiest co-operation in the matter, and he was sorry Dr. Mackellar had said the place was not suitable. He would support the proposition that the medical gentlemen named, with Mr. Dean, should form a sub-committee to deal with the matter.

The resolution was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN said, with regard to the matter contained in the first letter, he did not think the board could take any further steps, as they had been making representations to the Government respecting it for the last three years.

Dr. MACKELLAR pointed out that some relief might be afforded to the hospital by the transmission of a number of patients to Little Bay. The Coast Hospital was suitable for a great many patients, and he would be glad to take any now that the typhoid fever epidemic was virtually over. He could find accommodation for 50 cases within the next 10 days. They all knew how difficult it was to find accommodation during the time the typhoid fever was raging, and he could state that at one time there were as many as 600 cases of typhoid in the city hospitals alone.

The following letter from the Colonial Secretary's Office, dated June 20, was read:—"Referring to your letter of the 13th September last, in which after drawing attention to section 10 of the Sydney Hospital Act of 1881 to the effect (as you cite it) 'that all officers of the hospital are servants of the institution, and under the control of the board,' you state that it is the desire of the board that so far as their relations with the Government are concerned the lady superintendent be considered as one of the officers referred to, I am directed by the Colonial Secretary to transmit herewith for the information of the board of directors a copy of an opinion which has been obtained from the Attorney-General on the subject." The following is the opinion of the Attorney-General:—"Miss Osburn, it seems to me, is by the agreement of 28th November, 1867, the servant of the Government of New South Wales, in the capacity of lady superintendent of the nursing department of the Sydney Hospital. That agreement, signed by the then Agent for the Colony in London, provided that, subject to the duties of the office being properly discharged, Miss Osburn was engaged for a period of three years, dating from the day of her departure from England; and her services were to be continued from the end of that term unless put an end to by either party by three calendar months previous notice. She had certain duties assigned to her, and under that agreement in the discharge of those duties she was directly responsible to the Board of Directors. In case of her permanent incapacity by reason of illness incurred during her term, she is entitled to a free return passage to England. In my opinion she remains under the agreement the servant of the Government; and her position is not, and could not, be affected by the Sydney Hospital Act, although her services will, under the direction of the Government, be rendered at the Sydney Hospital."

Mr. ABIGAIL said he thought the matter was one which should be referred to their own solicitor; if Miss Osburn was a servant of the Government the board should get a servant of its own. The act of incorporation placed all the servants under the control of the board, but it would appear from the opinion of the Attorney-General that Miss Osburn was placed in a false position, and, to say the least, a very unsatisfactory one. He would move that the opinion of counsel should be taken in regard to the matter.

Mr. I. J. JOSEPHSON seconded the resolution, which was carried.

A letter was received from the Board of Health Officer asking for the following particulars concerning the hospital, for the information of the Government:—The number of beds, distinguishing male from female, and surgical from medical; the number of medical staff, distinguishing honorary from paid officers; the number of dispensing staff, clerical staff, nursing staff, wardsmen, porters, gatekeepers, cooks, servants, and other attendants, and also the total number of paid officers of the hospital and the amounts of their salaries respectively.

The CHAIRMAN stated that the information was being prepared.

A letter was received from the resident medical staff, stating that a large amount of extra work was being thrown on them through the manager of the Government asylum, Mr. King sending patients suffering from chronic diseases for examination, and requesting that such steps should be taken as would free them from the work, which could not be considered a part of the duties of the resident staff of any hospital.

It was resolved that the matter should be brought under the notice of the Colonial Secretary, with a view of relieving the resident medical staff of any such responsibility.

A petition was received from a man named George Wood, lately an outdoor patient, and afterwards an indoor patient of the Sydney Hospital, complaining that an injury he had received had not been properly treated whilst he was in the institution. The petition set forth that in November last he received an injury to his right arm which necessitated his going to the Agricultural Hall for treatment. He was examined by a "young medical man," who expressed himself unable to find a fracture or dislocation. The arm was also examined by an "elderly medical man," but with the same result. The arm was put in triangular splints, but the pain was so great that Woods, when he got home, had the bandages removed. The next day he went again to the doctors, who upbraided him for taking off the splints, and told him if he did so again he might cure himself. The splint was again put on, and he was told that he was an old man, and could not expect to be free from pain. Week after week he attended and exhibited his arm, and this was continued till nearly all the flesh had gone from it. Operations were afterwards performed upon him with the galvanic battery, but without any beneficial effect. He afterwards appealed to Mr. Starkey, who got him admitted as an indoor patient of the hospital. Four days after his admission Dr. Brady examined him and found that the injury was in the shoulder, and that the shoulder had been dislocated. He then underwent another operation, but the joint could not be replaced, and he was afterwards discharged, his arm being useless for the remainder of his life.

A lengthy discussion, in which members of the board expressed strong sympathy with the case, took place. It was pointed out that Dr. Cox, jun., was the first to attend the case, and that the "elderly medical gentleman" referred to in the petition was Dr. Williams, who had since gone to England.

The matter was adjourned till the next meeting, in order that a report might be obtained from Dr. Cox in regard to it.

The board then adjourned.

THE GOVERNMENT LABOUR EXCHANGE.

Matters in connection with the Labour Exchange, and with the unemployed generally, appear to indicate that a normal state of the labour market is again being attained. The policy of instituting the Exchange was to distribute the men as far as possible over the colony; and, considering that 2345 free passes by rail and steamer have been given within the past two months, the object appears to have been fairly compassed. Although the attendance day by day at the depot has not decreased to any appreciable extent, still the proportion of bona fide applicants for employment has been growing steadily and beautifully less. The number of loafers remains much about the same, and many of them appear to have a strong outward affinity to the "muddling and very dirty crowds" who attend the police courts during the earlier part of the day. The thundering denunciations at the [illegible] have dwindled to a mere whisper, for there is but the smallest handful of men to listen. One of the orators is about to pack up his laurels in his portmanteau and to return home; and some of the rest of the once-shining lights are now, so to speak, hopelessly extinguished.

The engagements effected through the Exchange, from the 10th to the 27th ultimo show a decrease during the latter part of that time. On the 13th instant there were 76 men engaged, the highest number; on the 16th the number was 53, and on the 23rd there were 23. The total for the 13 days was 249. Yesterday there were 12 engagements, as follows:—Four pick-and-shovel men, for North Willoughby, at 7s. per day; a boy, for driving a horse at Redmyre, 10s. a week and board; one unskilled labourer for glue factory, £36 per annum and board; a general kitchen gardener, Bowral, £30 per annum with board; and five metal men, for Bowral, at 3s. 6d. per cubic yard.

The demand for labour through the Exchange keeps up very much the same. It is interesting to note that all through what is or has been called the duration of the unemployed question, good pick-and-shovel men have always been wanted, and the supply has never equalled the demand. On Monday a prominent contractor told Mr. Treatt that he could do with any number of good men on the Nyngan line, as many of the men who had come up were more or less incompetent. He added that it was useless for him to attend the Exchange, as the class of men on hand were not of a suitable description from his point of view. In truth the complaints from the employers show no signs of decreasing. Mr. Treatt has a large and extremely miscellaneous correspondence on that subject. One gentleman publishes the fact that he engaged a guileless young man, presumedly destitute, through the Exchange; that the young man obtained an advance of 5s. 6d., for the supposed purpose of buying boots, and then performed a retreat which appears permanent. Another correspondent bewails the dishonesty of another wolf in lamb's clothing, who had decamped with some of the property of a fellow-employee—it would hardly be fair to say fellow-worker. A third letter sorrowfully records that "the man you sent us was no conchsmith, for he could not shoe two pieces of iron together. Yesterday we gave him 14s. and sent him away. We want another smith now, and we must have a good man." As a consequence of these complaints, Mr. Treatt has decided that in future he will send on only pick-and-shovel men and farm labourers (who are also much wanted) to up-country places without testimonials from their last employers, so that in future applicants for a position entailing skilled labour will have to prove their fitness before the State is charged with the cost of their passage. It is only fair, however, to add that some of the communications received are of a very different character.

A large employer of labour at Dalcalmate, Whittingham, has sent to Mr. Treatt, stating that he was open to take 20 men at once to work at "burning off" at the rate of 5s. per acre. He added that there was plenty of employment in the district, and that the men could be their own masters and earn fair rates of wages if they chose to exert themselves.

Respecting the Government works, it is stated that a gang of 100 single men are ready to start for the Field of Mars. Mr. Oxley is getting the ground ready, so that when the men come up there will be no confusion before work is commenced. Tools, blankets, &c., will be provided, the wages being 5s per day. It is possible that a start may be made on Friday or Saturday, and if not, by Tuesday at the latest.

Acting under the instructions of the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Treatt has arranged for sending 20 married men to work at the University paddock, in lowering the grass plots in front of the grand façade to the level fixed by the Colonial Architect, and to make level one or two uneven places in the ground.

About a dozen men have been sent up to Campbelltown in connection with the work under Mr. Charles Moore, of the Botanic Gardens, the rate of earnings varying from 5s. to 10s. per day. Some 30 married men are also employed under the same gentleman at Wentworth Park. It has been Mr. Stuart's idea throughout to keep the married men as near the city as possible, at the same time sending the single men as far afield as possible. It is very satisfactory to note that the arrangements for supplying the wives and families of the married men with funds are giving general satisfaction. On Monday Mr. Treatt paid 155 women at the depot, mostly the wives of the men employed at Bankstown. The women were profuse in their expressions of gratitude for the thoughtfulness of the authorities.

It is most likely that before the close of the week the works at the Paddington rifle butts, which were authorised some time ago, will be commenced. Married men will be given the preference among the applicants for the reasons already stated; but it is not likely that all the men required by Government will be forthcoming.

This morning 40 more married men proceed to Bankstown, and after disposing of these Mr. Treatt will proceed to Wentworth Park where he will pay the men there, the wives' pay day being on Thursday. How all this work can be carried on when the Abergeldie comes in it is hard to say as the offices of the Department are much more than fully occupied. This steamer is expected by Friday or Saturday, the reported number of immigrants exceeding 500. One matter which it is necessary in the interests of health and common decency to call attention to, is the fact that some of the callers at the Exchange come there in a disgracefully dirty condition, and cannot take their pipes out of their mouths even when remonstrated with. They crowd round the entrance to the Immigration depot, and obstructing the passage, making an entrance thither a little less pleasant than that of a fourth-rate public-house. It is possible that in the Abergeldie there may be over a 100 single women who will spend a few days at the depot. It is in every way desirable that the work of the immigration department should not be hindered, and that the immigrants themselves, more especially the young girls, should not be molested or obstructed in passing to and fro, as in the case of the new arrivals by the Bann. If possible the work of the Exchange should be confined for three or four days at least after the Abergeldie's arrival to the exterior of the main building, at the same time taking every precaution that any canaille who may present themselves at the gate should be excluded. As it has been before stated, the men who want work as a rule take some care to render themselves presentable; while the presence of a few of the very unwashed discourage a possible employer from coming forward.

HARES AGAIN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—People seem to be thoroughly awake now to the necessity of preventing the serious damage caused to orchardists and others by hares. My opinion is, that nothing short of extirpation will be of use. I should say attempted extirpation, for I am quite sure that an expenditure of one million sterling per annum will never rid the country of hares, rabbits, and sparrows. Those who brought them to the colony no doubt had good intentions, never dreaming of the frightful loss that must inevitably ensue. What are we to do? Some say, paint the stem with some offensive matter, and sprinkle it over the tops. I have tried this plan, and find it answers very well in dry weather; but when rain comes it washes off, and the work requires to be done again. This plan may do in a small plantation, but my expensive experience is that it will not do on a large scale. For instance, I have 11,000 trees, covering 110 acres of land; to brush every tree a man has to walk 41½ miles; this, added to the labour of painting and sprinkling (after all a mere temporary process, requiring to be repeated three or four times a year), is too costly, and only half effective. I have a remedy—I think a perfect cure; hence, I have troubled you with this letter. My orangery and lemon-grove consists of two blocks, one 80 acres, the other 30 acres. I have wired in the two blocks, and have had no trouble since the first week after the work was done, when I found that four hares were enclosed in the 80-acre orchard. After hunting a whole day by two men with guns and dogs, the poor animals were destroyed. Since that time there is not a hare's track to be found. This method is somewhat expensive, but, no doubt, cheapest eventually. My wire is netting of a light guage, 3in. mesh and 3ft. 6in. wide, tacked on to the ordinary thin rail fence. This width of wire just comes under the top rail. The hares could easily jump over, but the wire confuses them, and they do not appear to know how far to go out to be able to jump the fence. A few persons, fortunately a very few, look upon coursing as a manly game; the large majority think it puerile and cruel. Large concourses of people gather at these exhibitions, but no doubt the betting and our national love of sight-seeing are the great attractions. If the Government should decide upon endeavouring to destroy all the hares, I do not see that the coursers need complain any more than the people who had to get rid of their beautiful lop-eared and other fancy rabbits when the Rabbit Destruction Act came in force. I would venture to suggest that when the hares are all gone, the valuable enclosures now used for coursing grounds may be utilised for national advantage, by a system of experimental farming, which would tend to elevate the ideas of the owners, and give more lasting pleasure.

I have omitted to mention the cost of the wire: it will be 1760 yards of wire netting at 3½d. per yard, and it takes two men three days to fix it—in all, say about £27—not an expensive plan when the benefit is considered; but rather hard upon many thousands of cultivators to be compelled to incur such an outlay for the amusement of a few.

The barque Edwin Reed, from Port Blakely, with lumber and a cargo of 300 cases salmon, entered the Heads at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and, after being passed by the port health officer, was towed to an anchorage in Neutral Bay by the steam-tug Port Jackson. The Edwin Reed hails from Bath, Maine, U. S. A., where she was built in 1874 by Adams and Hitchcock. Her owners are Frank Reed and Co., of the same place, whose fleet also includes the ship Ellen Goodspeed, which arrived in port on Sunday. She is a whole-some-looking barque of 1164 tons register, can carry a large cargo, and sails well. Captain Charles W. Cate is in command, and, as does his vessel, makes his first acquaintance with Australian waters. The Edwin Reed took her departure from Port Townshend on April 17, rounded Cape Flattery on the following day, and experienced light westerly and N.W. winds until the latitude of San Francisco was passed on April 26. Light northerly and baffling winds followed to the N.E. trades, which were got in at about 32° N., were very poor, and gave out altogether in about a fight and baffling, but thereafter a gale in the morning would be succeeded by a calm in the afternoon, the interval between the two being at times even much less than this. Nearing the coast the weather was very uncertain, and some heavy gales were experienced, which were accompanied by unusually high seas, but the vessel passed through them unscathed, and came into port in first-class order in every respect. On the 13th June, at 8 a.m., Norfolk Island was sighted, bearing S.S.W. distant about 20 miles; and on the 20th Lord Howe Island was sighted, the vessel, owing to baffling winds, being within view of it for four days afterwards. Land at Broken Bay was made at 8 p.m. on the 30th June, and the Heads were entered as stated. The Edwin Reed, which is consigned to Messrs. Robey, Brothers, and Co., is to be berthed at Dibbs' Wharf to-day.

After that light variable winds were met with till the Heads were entered at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Wave was towed to Pyrmont Bight, where she anchored till 3 p.m., when she was taken alongside of the Union Company's Wharf.

The ship Loch Ranza, from Newcastle to San Francisco, was spoken by the brig Wave on June 23, in lat. 34°47 S., and long. 158°40 E. She wished to be reported well. The barque Delcarine was passed on the same day.

The Flora had fresh westerly winds and smooth sea to the Barren; thence to Gabo S.W. gale and high sea; from Eden to Sydney light variable winds and fine weather. The Flora was detained at Eden some hours longer than was anticipated, owing to 76 head of cattle having to be shipped there.

Another addition has just been made to the already long fleet of steamers that finds employment on the waters of the harbour, and that has proved so useful to the public since the short time previously to their advent. The name of the new steamer is the Florrie Ellison, which has been built by Mr. H. H. Swan, of the firm of Swan Brothers, Balmain, to the order of Mr. Peter Ellison, shipowner, of coal. This is the record steamer Mr. Swan has built for Mr. Ellison, the Alpha having been the previous job, and under the reflected great credit upon both the builder and workmanship. The new vessel measures 70 feet overall, 64 feet on keel, 14 feet beam, and her depth of hold is 8 feet. She has two masts, and there is a bridge amidships. The Florrie Ellison has been built to answer the purposes of a water-tank, &c. She carries two tanks, one forward and the other aft, holding about 50 tons. The engines, which come from the works of Messrs. Plenty and Son, are of 20 horse-power nominal, and seem an excellent piece of workmanship. Yesterday afternoon the Florrie Ellison was taken for a first trip, and the results were regarded as highly satisfactory. On the first trial the steamer was covered in 9 minutes 27½ seconds, and on the second in 8 minutes 25 seconds. Several gentlemen were on board, including the Government Engineer, Mr. Suttie, and some boats were proposed and duly responded to, including those of the owners and the Government steamers, the Lord of the Isles, whose long experience in command of steamers in Sydney harbour is well known, has been given charge of the Florrie Ellison.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S STEAMER TASMANIA.

Mitchell's Maritime Register of the 23rd May gives the following particulars respecting the P. and O. Company's new steamer Tasmania:—"On the 15th inst., Messrs. Caird and Co., shipbuilders, Greenock, launched from their yard a full-powered steel screw steamer of 5060 tons gross, for the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company. Her principal dimensions are:—Length, 400 feet; breadth, 45 feet; and depth (moulded), 31 feet 6 inches. She will be supplied by the builders with a pair of inverted direct-acting compound engines, indicating 4750 horse power. The cylinders measure 53 inches and 93 inches diameter respectively, with a piston stroke of 63 inches. There is a condensing surface of 7600 square feet. Steam being generated in three double-ended boilers, having 18 furnaces, and to carry a working pressure of 160lb. to the square inch. This steamer has been designed and built especially for the Australian passenger trade of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. She is the third of four steamers contracted for by Messrs. Caird and Co. at the beginning of last year. This steamer is, like her predecessor, built entirely of steel, and in accordance with Lloyd's rule for the 100A class. She is classed A 1. The construction of the ship has been carried out under the personal supervision of Mr. Taylor, the company's inspector at Greenock. Every known means have been taken to ensure strength, perfect safety, stability, and easy motion. She has a Board of Trade certificate for carrying 150 first and second class passengers; and she can easily be converted into a Government transport, her lower deck being fitted up especially for troops. She is divided into seven watertight compartments. The bunkerods have been stiffened beyond the usual requirements. All the watertight doors are worked from the upper deck, which is a considerable height above the load water line. The poop and upper deck are of steel from stem to stern, sheathed with teak 3 inches thick, while the lower and orlop decks have the usual stringers and longitudinal ties sheathed with pitch pine. The beams of all the decks are of great strength, being of the patent Butterly section. On leaving the Clyde the steamer was named the Tasmania, and after the launch she was towed to the Victoria Harbour, where her machinery will be put on board." A cable message published on Monday states that the Tasmania has been taken for a trial trip, when a rate of 14½ knots an hour was obtained.

The quarterly and yearly abstracts of revenue and expenditure for the period ended 30th June were published to-day. The revenue from all sources for the quarter just expired was £1,834,405, showing an increase of £119,692 on that for the corresponding period of last year. The revenue for the year amounted to £6,581,281, and shows a decrease for the 12 months of £181,611. During the quarter just closed the Customs yielded £136,447, being an increase of £53,378 on the receipts from that source for the June quarter of last year. The principal increases were in spirits and "specific duties," under 34 Vic., No. 21, and the principal decreases were in the receipts on tea, tobacco, and cigars. Excise duties gave £18,349, showing an advance of £14,603. Stamps produced £48,602, showing a slight loss. Licenses aggregated £75,906, showing a falling off to the extent of about £3500, the decrease being mainly attributable to a falling off in receipts from "retail fermented and spirituous liquors' licenses." The revenue from the land aggregated £534,480, showing an increase of £6454 on the corresponding period of last year. From the railways was derived £507,203, showing an increase of £38,718. The Post Office yielded £111,809; the Mint, £2502; fees for escort, &c., £207; pilotage, harbour rates, &c., £13,571; registration of brands, £155; and Public school fees, £15,512. "Fees of office" aggregated, £16,705; miscellaneous receipts, £12,466; fines and forfeitures, £5084; and unclassified receipts, £20,712.

The import markets were characterised by an extreme amount of dulness, due in a large measure to the commencement of the second half of the year, a time at which many tradespeople are busily engaged stock-taking. The dulness is, so far as it relates to the wine and spirit business, due in some degree to the new tariff coming into force, tradespeople having to a considerable extent anticipated the operation of the new scale by withdrawals from bond. We have heard of sales of small lots of OVP, Sorine, and Sazerac three-star brandy, and Walker's whisky at agent's quotations. A small quantity of Bullock|Lade's Old Scotch whisky also moved off at 12s. 6d. in bond. A few tons of coffee (Costa Rica), at 82d., also changed hands, and a fair line of Curtis and Harvey's sporting powder was disposed of at agents' quotations. A sale was also effected of a small parcel of cement; and woolpacks were sold at 2s. 4d. and 2s. 5d., according to quantity. In other respects the transactions were of an insignificant character. The flour trade is marked by great inactivity. Quotations are as follow:—Town brands: Adelaide, £10 12s. 6d. to £11. Country brands: S. A., £9 to £9 10s.; N.S. Wales, £9 to £9 15s.; special make, up to £11; Victorian, £9 to £9 10s., special make up to £11. Wheat, 4s. 5d. to 4s. 6d. Respecting the Adelaide wheat market, Messrs. Cave and Co., writing under date of Port Adelaide, 28th June, report:—

"Our market's are much about the same as when we last wrote, with if anything a firmer feeling. A strong demand still obtains for wheat, to fill charterers' engagements. As farmers seem determined not to part with their grain at present quotations, shippers find a difficulty in filling their ships. Some 100 tons still remain in growers' hands, but with a moderate advance in European values a large quantity would at once change hands. We quote wheat firm at 4s. 1d. here, outports 4s., whilst flour maintains its value of about £9 10s. and £8 10s. for town and country respectively. Bran at 13d. and pollard at 14½., find a ready market at quotations. Oatmeal and cereal mills have given our young wheat plants an excellent start, but of course it is too early in the season to speculate final results."

At auction this morning some white sugars and brewing crystals, being bringing Government influence to bear to pass "the measure." His Lordship evidently will assume that the colonies could not have expressed their wishes in a clearer or more precise manner. Had the Convention simply laid down certain general principles as the basis of legislation, the work left for the Imperial Government and Parliament would have been very different in character. But the Convention drafted a bill with an elaboration of detail indicating exactly what was required upon every point to be provided for. What will be left for the Imperial authorities to do but to adopt the bill as a whole, should the colonial Parliaments, by adopting it as a whole, express their complete satisfaction with it? Mr. Davies, in the Victorian Assembly, has contended that the Imperial Parliament will be free to alter the bill, just as it altered our own Constitution Bill when sent home by the colonial Legislature. It may well be doubted, however, whether the Imperial Parliament would make any material alteration unless Imperial interests required it, if this elaborate basis were approved in its integrity by the Legislatures of all these colonies. The bill provides for the formation of a Council of fourteen members, or less, to whom may be committed the power of legislating for the whole of Australasia. That is the basis of federation laid down by the Council. If all the colonial Parliaments asked the Imperial Parliament to empower these colonies to federate upon that basis, is it reasonable to suppose that the Imperial Parliament would lay down another? Lord Derby takes a very different view. So far as he looks forward to anything being done, he looks forward to the creation of this Federal Council. Should we all unite in urging the Imperial Parliament to provide for a federal vestry, we may be sure that the Imperial Parliament will not say, "You are too modest; take a Federal Parliament instead."

But the reference to the dealings of the Imperial Parliament with the colonial Constitution Bill was unfortunate for an advocate of the Convention resolution. The Constitution Bill that was sent home from the colonial Legislature, and passed with modifications as a schedule to an Imperial statute, was a bill that had been discussed here in Committee of the Whole House clause by clause. It was not a measure drafted by a committee of gentlemen outside Parliament, and then accepted in Parliament "as a basis," under cover of a bald resolution submitted in such a way as to preclude exhaustive debate upon its principles or its details. Can anyone imagine our Assembly accepting in globo, upon a mere resolution, a bill to reconstruct the Constitution of New South Wales, if such a bill were drafted by the Government for transmission to England as the basis for an Imperial Act? Is it less absurd—is it not even more so—that a bill to serve as the basis of a Constitution for all the colonies put together should be accepted by any colonial Legislature in such a manner? But that is what the Parliament of Victoria is now being asked to do. In the light of Lord Derby's despatch, and of the general probabilities of the case, it may be assumed that the Convention Bill, if recommended by addresses from all the colonial Legislatures, would undergo little discussion in the Imperial Parliament, because it would be regarded as an exact expression of the desires of the colonies upon matters concerning themselves. But, in the nature of the case, the bill, if adopted in the colonies under cover of bare resolutions, could not undergo here the thorough discussion, clause by clause and line by line, which any Constitution Bill for Australasia ought certainly to undergo. The result would be that the new Constitution would be set up without legitimate discussion either at one end of the world or at the other. The only place where it would have undergone the form of discussion in committee as a bill would have been the chamber of the Convention in Sydney; and we know pretty well what that form of discussion was worth. The truth is, that our Parliament, instead of asking the Imperial Government to introduce a Federal Constitution Bill on the Convention basis, should rather forward a protest against any action of the kind—a document pointing out the unfitness of the measure for the purposes it is potentially intended to serve, and deprecating the initiation of any Imperial proceeding that would permanently affect the interests of Australasia upon a foundation which the colonial Legislatures had not fully discussed.

The tendency to excessive production of leading articles of food, clothing, minerals, ships, and money, and to a consequent cheapening of the value of each and all of them, must have arrested general attention as a feature of more than passing interest to every member of the community.

In agricultural affairs we see that the world's production of wheat is greater than ever it was. America, India, and Australia are furnishing enlarged supplies of grain to Europe. And the London price has not been so low for a long time, if ever before. In three years past there has been a decline of over 10 per cent., and town-made seconds flour has steadily declined from 36s. to 30s. per 280lb. Oats have declined over 5 per cent. within the same time. Sugar also is far more abundant and cheaper than ever it was before, the value of West Indian refining having decreased from 22s. per cwt. to 15s. in three years, whilst inferior sugar has been sold at 1d. per lb., and fine Demerara loaf has been sold at 2½d. The course of events seems to confirm the statement of the Governor of Fiji, who, a few months back, said that the sugar-production of the world was becoming excessive, and would soon cease to become a paying industry. Tea also, another of the most universally consumed articles, has been supplied more plentifully and cheaply within the past year or two than at any previous time. That the leading agricultural productions of the world have thus become more abundant and cheap is a matter for gratification to the general consuming community. The pastoral industry has perhaps not yielded its treasures quite so abundantly as the agricultural But even here we see, for instance, that there has been a vast increase in the quantity of wool produced, and reduction in price. Though from an Australian point of view this may not appear quite satisfactory, yet even the colonial consumer of woollen goods must share with the English in the advantage of the lower price which the enlarged production has created. And there is some compensation to the grazier in the new business of meat exportation, which, while affording him a good market must tend to keep down the price to the European consumer. Then we find the leading minerals—iron, copper, tin, lead—all remarkably cheap. With the raw material so abundant and low in price, and other favouring conditions, nearly all manufactured goods required for the convenience and comfort of the growing civilisation of the race are reduced more or less in value. The tendency is towards a lowering of prices of almost everything.

And whilst the products of the earth and of the industrial manufactures are tending to an unparalleled repletion, the means of their transport are beyond question altogether in excess of anything previously known. Builders have made steamships and sailing-vessels in excess even of the vastly increased traffic requirements which the immense production in all departments has created. Our last English files convey the news that shipowners have been seeking to combine to lay up some of their vessels, that the remainder may obtain profitable employment. Freights are lower than ever they were before on all the great ocean tracks of the world; and as for passenger fares, the latest development—of £2 for the voyage of 3000 miles from Germany to America, by the North German line of steamships—seems almost incredible. To all this immense accretion of wealth must be added the accumulation of money. Capital was perhaps never before so plentiful and so cheap as it is now in the great centres of the world. Financiers hardly know where to turn to invest to advantage.

It is true that the people of Australia have not shared in all the benefits of this excessive production and cheapening of the articles of consumption. Meat is dearer than it was, not owing to the proportionately lessened production, for the production is greater per head of population, but to the new market opened in Europe for our produce. Money also is still very dear in Australia; but the time cannot be far off when there will be some greater equalisation of rates on the two sides of the world. If, however, we have had the price of meat raised, we are getting at lower prices the manufactured articles which have been so largely produced in Europe. An open port and free competition give us everything at a trifle in advance of English cost, and occasionally below it.

It is of course not very difficult to account for all this accumulation of wealth. It is obviously the result of the improved appliances brought by education and science to the service of labour and capital in the development of the resources of the various nations of the world—notably of America, Australia and other new lands. Europe, with its dense population and other conditions, has contributed its share in the supply of labour, capital, machinery, and other things, whilst the broad acres of America and Australia have yielded their fruits abundantly for the general well-being. Free interchange of the advantages possessed by each has promoted the prosperity of all. Australia and America could never have been to-day the prosperous nations that they are but for what has been done for them by Europeans emigrating to them, as well as by Europeans working in Europe for them. Protectionists only recognise half the benefit—that which they get from the influx of labour, and many want to be protected even against that. Everything else coming here is a clear detriment to the country, it is said, because it has to be paid for. Just as if it does not usually pay a man better to buy a thing than to make it himself. Every man to his trade—the subdivision of labour—is a well-recognised principle of political economy; and what is true in the case of individuals and classes, is true of nations. Each working according to its own conditions will give an aggregation of results much greater than if each seeks to do everything for itself. And it is due to this policy, though with some infractions, that we have the accumulation of wealth and the cheapening of cost of living.

The relative services of labour and capital in the creation of this wealth and cheapness cannot very well be estimated. But the effect of the accumulations seems to be to give a smaller return to the capitalist and a larger advantage to the labourer. The capitalist has his compensation in the larger quantity of money on which he gets his return, as well as in the cheapening of the cost of living. The labourer has his advantage in generally higher wages, shorter hours, more holidays, and cheaper cost of living. These facts were all more or less elucidated recently by Dr. Giffen. The condition of the workers generally is improved, this assumption not being invalidated by the fact that depressions do occur in particular businesses from time to time. Of course, no one claims perfection for the economical conditions under which the human race subsists. But that there is progress will not be denied. Anyone who is not disposed to take a gloomy view of life cannot but regard the conditions of the world as much more conducive to the happiness of man than those which obtained fifty years ago.

The revenue returns published yesterday in the Gazette show that for the year ending with the 30th June there was a decrease of £481,000; but that for the quarter closing at the same date there was an increase of £119,000. The figures for the year exhibit a loss of £926,000 upon the land sales; and in the face of that there is some room for congratulation in the fact that the net decrease in the revenue as a whole has been brought down to the amount above stated. If we struck out this item of land sales from the receipts for the twelve months just ended, and the twelve months that expired a year ago, there would remain an increase of £371,000. Until the land question is settled we must remain content with low figures in this Department of the public income; but it is noticeable that those for the quarter do show a small increase of some £6000 upon the returns for the corresponding quarter of last year. It is to be observed that the unsettlement, with the drought and other causes, has told heavily upon free selection, for the quarter's decrease in deposits was £40,000. The taxation revenue for the quarter shows an increase of £63,000, which includes £15,000 obtained from the new excise charges upon cigars and tobacco. At the same time the Customs duty on tobacco and cigars fell off to the extent of £5600. This is easily accounted for. In the anticipation of the new charges there had previously been a rush to the bonded warehouses for the purpose of escaping them, and until the excess then withdrawn from bond has fully gone into consumption, the effect of the disturbance will be felt. The Customs revenue as a whole increased by £53,000, which is a satisfactory sum for the quarter when the circumstance before referred to and the causes of depression in the colony are considered. The Railway receipts for the quarter, which make up a total of £507,000, show an increase of £58,000, and, with the increase on the Customs, nearly represent the amount of the general increase; but, of course, as these are only the gross receipts, and it is impossible to estimate the expenditure to be set against them, their significance lies rather in the evidence they give of the development of traffic than in any inferences from the revenue point of view. On the whole, however, the returns for the quarter may be regarded as encouraging.

The Regulation Paper of Sir G. W. Des Vœux in the matter of the carrying of arms, &c., came into operation yesterday, July 1, and all British subjects are now prohibited from selling, giving, or otherwise supplying arms, ammunition, and explosive substances to natives of the Western Pacific. The Western Pacific Islands under the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner include New Guinea and all the different groups from the Equator to the New Hebrides. Savage islands, like the Solomon group, and comparatively civilised ones like Tonga and Samoa, with the waters within three miles of any of their shores, are alike included, and in none of them may any British vessel carry arms or ammunition exceeding a certain specified number and quantity for the protection of her crew and the ordinary lawful purposes of such vessel. No British subject within the limits defined shall give, sell, or otherwise supply any arms or explosive substance to any native of any of the islands, nor shall he aid in any way whatever in supplying him with any single firearm or ammunition. This is undoubtedly a good regulation, but why, it may be asked, has it been delayed so long? If it is necessary now, we may presume that it was still more necessary some months or years ago, when recruiting for labour was so diligently carried on. If it is wrong for a trader to sell firearms and ammunition to savages now, was it right for the Government of Fiji to do so a month or a year ago? Is it not probable that the skipper of a trading vessel may feel aggrieved that he is now liable to be punished for selling a trade musket to a savage for copra, when the High Commissioner himself, as Governor of Fiji, has been paying away thousands of similar muskets to the returned labour leaving that colony for their homes in the same Western Pacific groups. The Government of Fiji has been doing a large wholesale business in arms and ammunition, and now under some pressure perhaps from without, or it may be from purely conscientious motives, it is resolved to give up the trade, and in doing so the High Commissioner prohibits at the same time any British trader from engaging in the retail branch of the business. Under existing arrangements, however, he can only prevent the British trader from doing this, and it is more than likely that the effect of his Regulation Paper will be, not to prevent the natives from getting arms and ammunition, but simply to transfer a profitable trade from British subjects to those of foreign nationalities. It is most desirable that the trade should be effectually prevented. What we have to regret is that the Regulation has been so long delayed, that so many arms have been already supplied to the natives, and that for want of some international agreement they can still obtain all the British muskets which they can afford to buy, though not directly from British subjects.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The action brought by the Imperial Government against Mr. Bradlaugh, for voting illegally in the House of Commons, has been brought to a conclusion, and, according to our cablegram, has resulted in a verdict against the member for Northampton. It was on February 12 that Mr. Bradlaugh renewed his attempt to take the oath and his seat. He succeeded in administering the oath to himself, and immediately after the ceremony had been completed Sir Stafford Northcote moved the same resolution which had been carried several times before, declaring that Mr. Bradlaugh should not be permitted to take the oath. In spite of Mr. Speaker's direction to him to retire from the House, Mr. Bradlaugh took part in the division, and his right to do so being challenged, another division was taken on this point (he again voting) before the numbers in the first division had been declared. Both resolutions were carried by considerable majorities. Sir Stafford Northcote then moved that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to exclude Mr. Bradlaugh from the precincts of the House for the remainder of the session, unless he undertook not further to disturb its proceedings. This was carried by a majority of 108, Mr. Bradlaugh again voting with the minority. The Attorney-General then instituted an action for the recovery of the penalty (£1500) which a member, not properly sworn, incurs by voting, with the result, as disclosed in our cablegram, that a verdict has been given against Mr. Bradlaugh.

From other of our cablegrams this morning it will be seen that the Earl of Derby has intimated his willingness to assume the immediate protectorate of New Guinea, and promised to consult the Cabinet as to the propriety of including other islands in the protectorate. The International Conference on Egyptian affairs continues its sittings day after day. The British proposals in regard to the finances are to be referred to a committee of experts for consideration and report. On Monday night the House of Commons, by a majority of 42, declined to discuss a motion brought forward by Sir Stafford Northcote, censuring the Government for its action in regard to the Anglo-French agreement, on the ground that at the present juncture such discussion was untimely. Further news has been received from the Soudan confirming that previously received as to the fall of Berber. Precautions are being taken at Rome in view of a possible outbreak of cholera, one death from that direful malady having already been reported. Preparations on a larger scale than ever, for the reception and storage of Australian meat, are being made in London. The dock companies are reducing the storage charges, and additional chambers capable of holding 3000 tons will be ready by August.

Mr. Speaker being unable to leave his residence, in consequence of having again sprained his foot, Mr. Cameron yesterday took the chair in the Legislative Assembly, and Mr. Heydon officiated as Chairman of Committees. After the questions and formal business had been disposed of, Mr. Luscombe moved the adjournment of the House, for the purpose of referring to Mr. Watson, member for Gundagai, but was promptly ruled out of order. Mr. A. G. Taylor then attacked Mr. Luscombe, using language which led to his being compelled to withdraw and make a kind of apology. The consideration of the 82nd clause of the Land Bill was resumed in Committee of the Whole. An amendment, moved by Mr. Lyne, to make pastoral rents dependent upon the carrying capacity of the run, at the rate of 4d. per sheep and 2s. 6d. per head of cattle, was discussed until a quarter-past 12 o'clock, when the amendment was negatived without division. Mr. Farnell then moved that the minimum rent of the western division be one penny per acre, and intimated that he would subsequently move that the minimum in the central division be three halfpence per acre, and that he would leave the minimum for the eastern division twopence, as in the clause. The amendment was carried by 52 to 3. Mr. Farnell moved to make the minimum in the central division three halfpence per acre, which was agreed to by 44 to 9. The minimum in the eastern division was fixed at one penny. The debate was then adjourned. The amendments made by the Legislative Council in the Oyster Fisheries Bill were considered, and the House adjourned at 6 minutes past 2 o'clock.

The following is the business paper of the Legislative Council for to-day (Wednesday):—Question: Mr. Piddington to ask the Postmaster-General,—1. Is he aware that the postage charge upon books and magazines in Victoria has been reduced to 4d. per lb.? 2. Is it his intention to reduce the rate here, in order to place the booksellers of New South Wales in the same position as the booksellers of Victoria? General Business—Orders of the Day: Matrimonial Causes Act Amendment Bill (No. 2), second reading; Supreme Court Appellate Jurisdiction Bill, second reading; Pastoral Dams Bill (as amended in select committee), second reading—upon which the previous question has been put; District Courts Act Further Amendment Bill, third reading; Illegal Lotteries Bill, third reading; Mittagong Coal-mining Company's Railway Bill, third reading; Tamworth Cattle Saleyards Bill, third reading; O'Doud's Estate Leasing Bill, second reading.

According to the notice-paper of the Legislative Council, Mr. John Stewart will move to-morrow night a series of resolutions against the annexation, appropriation, or conquest of New Guinea, and the establishment of any Federal Government having legislative jurisdiction over any two or more Australian colonies, and in favour of the passing of an Act to prohibit the influx into the colony of escaped or emancipated convicts; but it is probable that the consideration of the resolutions will be postponed to a future day. If the House should proceed with them to-morrow, the whole question will be gone into by the Attorney-General, the Hon. W. B. Dalley, who, it is understood, will make an elaborate speech on the subject.

The usual weekly meeting of the Executive Council was held yesterday morning, but the business was unimportant.

A Gazette was issued yesterday containing the abstracts of revenue and expenditure of the colony for the quarter and year ended 30th June, 1884. For the quarter the total revenue proper was £1,834,405 14s. 5d., showing an increase over the previous quarter of £119,802 10s. 10d. The disbursements during the quarter represent a grand total of £2,172,663 5s. 4d. We publish an abstract of the returns in another column.

The following are the principal clauses of Mr. W. H. Suttor's bill to amend the Matrimonial Causes Act:—1. "It shall be lawful for any married person who at the time of the institution of the suit shall together with the respondent be domiciled in New South Wales to present a petition to the Court praying that his or her marriage may be dissolved on the grounds following—(i.) That the person with whom petitioner is married has for the period of two years, and since the celebration of their marriage, been guilty of continued and habitual acts of drunkenness. (ii.) That the person with whom petitioner is married has at some period of his life, whether at a time before or after the celebration of their marriage shall be immaterial, become infected with a disease of so virulent a character as to affect injuriously and permanently the health and constitution of the respondent. Provided that no marriage shall be dissolved for the abovementioned causes if it shall be proved that the petitioner at the time of the marriage knew that the respondent was a person of drunken habits or was a person affected by such disease. 2. A sentence of judicial separation may be obtained by the petitioner on the grounds abovementioned, notwithstanding that such petitioner at the time of marriage knew that the respondent was a person of drunken habits, or was in a diseased condition. 3. 'In case the Court shall be satisfied on the evidence that the case of the petitioner has been proved, together with the fact of such domicile, the Court shall then pronounce a decree declaring such marriage to be dissolved. Provided that the Court shall not be bound to pronounce such decree if it shall find that the petitioner has during the marriage been guilty of repeated acts of drunkenness, or become infected with a disease otherwise than in consequence of such marriage, or if the petitioner shall, in the opinion of the Court, have been guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting and prosecuting such petition." The nature of the disease referred to is stated in the bill.

The following tenders were received and opened by the tender board at the Department of Public Works yesterday:—For the construction of 21 ashpits for the running shed at Eveleigh, five tenders; for the erection of a post and telegraph office at Paddington, nine tenders; for the erection of a lockup at Milltown, five tenders; for the erection of an overbridge at Goulburn station, Great Southern Railway, three tenders; for the construction of an iron drawbridge, with timber approach, over Edins Creek, at East Gosford, three tenders; and for the erection of a gatehouse and sheep and cattle yards at Glencoe, Armidale to Glen Innes railway extension, two tenders.

Mr. Whitton, Engineer-in-Chief for Railways, is at present engaged inspecting the line in course of construction from Cootamundra to Gundagai. Work was commenced on this railway by the contractors (Messrs. M'Sharry and Co.) last November, and June, 1885, is the time specified in the contract for the completion of the work. After inspecting the line to Gundagai, Mr. Whitton will proceed along the line in progress from Murrumburrah to Young, and inspect the work done there. This railway was commenced in September, 1882, and should be completed by the end of the present year. Mr. Whitton will return to Sydney on Saturday next.

In order to provide every facility for the thorough development of the silver mines in the Barrier Ranges, and with a view to securing to the fullest extent for Sydney the trade of that part of the colony and of the districts in the neighbourhood of the Darling, which have the town of Wilcannia for a centre, the Hon. G. R. Dibbs, acting-Minister for Works, is about to consult the Engineer-in-Chief for Railways upon the feasibleness of constructing a railway to Silverton, via Wilcannia. An officer of the Roads Department is already on his way to make the necessary arrangements for laying out a road from Wilcannia to the silver-bearing country.

There have recently been issued from the Mines Department three locality maps or plans, showing the measurements of leases taken up at and around Silverton, and charted to the 6th June. There are three centres in the Silverton district, around which leases have been, and are still being, applied for. One of these lies about 10 miles north-east of Silverton, the second is Silverton itself, and the third is Thackeringa, 25 miles north-west of Silverton. About 1500 or 1600 acres had been measured up to the date mentioned, and about 8000 acres had been applied for, and were awaiting measurement. At present there are three surveyors on the field, one being occupied in each district or centre, and kept in that district to avoid confusion; but if applications for leases continue for any time to come in as they are being received at present, it is probable that additional surveyors will have to be employed. During last summer the Department was absolutely unable to get any survey made, the drought being so severe that surveyors could not exist in the localities where their work lay; and this is the reason, we are informed, that so large an extent of land as that stated above remains unsurveyed.

The Royal Commission on water conservation met yesterday; Mr. R. L. Murray, M.L.A., occupied the chair, and the following members of the Commission were also present:—Mr. F. A. Franklin, C.E., Mr. Russell Barton, M.L.A., Mr. J. B. Donkin, Mr. F. B. Gipps, C.E., and Mr. G. W. Townsend. Mr. David Greig, the representative of Messrs. John Fowler and Sons, of England, was examined, and Mr. Dowdney, in the course of a lengthy examination, gave some very valuable information in regard to steam dam excavators and scoops, and referred specially to work which had been accomplished in this colony by their means.

A deputation, consisting of members of the Secularists' Association, had an interview with the Minister for Public Instruction yesterday, upon the question of religious instruction in Public schools. They were introduced by Mr. Copeland, M.L.A., and expressed their approval of the manner in which the Minister dealt with the proposals submitted to him by the deputation which waited upon him on the same subject last Friday. What they desired to submit was that if any religious dogma was permitted to be taught in schools supported by the State the secularists should be accorded the same privilege. Mr. Trickett, while declining with such meagre information before him to recognise the association as a religious body, requested the deputation to place their views before him in writing, when he promised to give them every consideration.

His Honor the Primary Judge concluded, yesterday, the hearing of the suit Lillis and others v. Davis, which had been eight days before the Equity Court. The suit was brought to have the defendant Joseph Davis declared an improper person to administer the estate of the late Thomas Hoskisson, of Burraba station, Liverpool Plains. His Honor declared that the defendant was a trustee for the estate as to one of the three selections claimed by him on the run, and deposed him from his trust for failure to file his accounts, as well as for arbitrarily attempting to sell the estate when his cestui que trusts were taking proceedings against him. His Honor's other reasons for his decision will be found set out at length in our law report. The defendant has to pay costs up to and inclusive of the hearing, except those which can be distinguished with regard to a number of charges urged by the plaintiff which his Honor did not consider proved. His Honor will take Ecclesiastical business to-day as well as urgent Equity motions.

The models for the statue of the Queen, required for the pedestal at the top of King-street, have been received by the Colonial Secretary from the local sculptors commissioned by Mr. Stuart to compete in modelling designs for the statue, and yesterday they were exhibited to the members of the Executive Council, in the Executive Council Chamber. It is scarcely probable, from what is said of the opinions expressed by most of the Ministers, and by his Excellency the Governor, after examining the models, that any one of them will be accepted as a design for the statue; but no decision with regard to them has been made known. There are four competitors in the work—Signor Simonetti, Signor Sani, M. Henri, and Mr. Beere. The firstnamed artist's model bears a fair likeness to the Queen, and the attitude of the figure is good, but it lacks the grace which is associated with that which is queenly, and does not fully satisfy the eye of a critic; it is, however, by far the best of the four. Two of the three others excited, yesterday, little else than laughter. One of the two is a figure modelled apparently in the style of Queen Elizabeth, of extraordinary proportions, and represented in an attitude of what seems to be violent rage. The other is the figure of an ill-shaped female, which, by reason of the model having been bronzed, brings to mind the probable aspect of a very richly-attired but exceedingly unattractive woman of colour. The fourth figure, which is that sent in by Mr. Beere, is graceful in its attitude, but in its features does not resemble the Queen, and generally is much too youthful in appearance.

The match between the Australian Eleven and a Surrey eleven is described by our special correspondent in a letter which we publish in our sporting column. It was the first appearance of the Australians in London, and the match created great interest. Our representatives gained a victory by eight wickets.

Mr. J. H. Palmer, who for many years past has occupied the position of shorthand writer to the Legislative Assembly, and who for the last few months has been absent from duty on sick leave, has finally retired from the public service on a full pension. This substantial reward to an old and respected public servant comes to Mr. Palmer after a service of over 40 years, he having received his first appointment under the colonial Government on the 1st January, 1844.

Italy is progressing. During the early part of May an Italian Derby, or Derby Reale, was inaugurated at Rome. This Italian copy of an English institution is to have a more practical end than mere horse-racing and betting. Its object (our Rome correspondent informs us in his letter, to be found in another column) is to improve the breed of horses for the Italian cavalry, and is said to have incubated in the brain of the great statesman Count Cavour, as a result of the Austro-Italian war. The Roman Derby is therefore a military and royal institution, but it may be taken for granted that "all the King's horses and all the King's men" will not rescue it from the operations of the bookmaker, who is always on the lookout for fresh fields and pastures new. The opening of the Turin Exhibition, for objects of national industry, is also described by our correspondent.

In accordance with arrangements made, an examination was held by the Phonographic Association last week, the principal test being the ability to write from dictation at least 100 words a minute. Eleven members underwent the examination, which was conducted by Messrs. Cumming and Corbett, but four only were successful in passing, viz., Hugh M'Lachlan, Arthur Fry, F. E. S. Hewlson, and W. Holmes, to whom the certificates of the association will be issued. Although similar examinations are held in Great Britain, the present examination was the first of its kind held in Australia. It is intended to hold these tests of speed half-yearly, and to have the certificates recognised as standards of competency.

A meeting of the City of Sydney Improvement Board was held yesterday afternoon at the Boardrooms in Castlereagh-street. Present—Mr. Benjamin Backhouse (in the chair), Dr. Craig Dixson, Messrs. Frank Senior, W. Bailey, and G. W. Evans. The business dealt mainly with a report from the City Building Surveyor having reference to the following properties, which were described as being in a dangerous condition:—A wall in connection with premises Nos. 49 and 51, Kent-street North (postponed from last meeting); a wall in connection with premises No. 100, Elizabeth-street; the northern wall of playground in connection with the High school, Castlereagh-street. After the various premises had been inspected, and a discussion had taken place thereon, it was resolved in regard to the first wall that it be ordered to be taken down within 10 days; the second wall was ordered to be demolished within 7 days, the City Building Surveyor being instructed to specially see to the matter; the third wall was ordered to be repaired, strengthened, and cemented to the satisfaction of the Building Surveyor. An application was heard by the board in connection with Nissen's Cafe, which matter had come before the board on the 26th ultimo. The owners were represented by their solicitors, Messrs. Salter and Barker, who applied for a re-hearing on the grounds that they had additional evidence to tender as to the condition of the building, and that they had not had sufficient time to prepare their case. The board eventually adjourned their decision till its next meeting, pending the production of certain counsel's opinion to be obtained in the matter. The board then adjourned.

A meeting of the Local Option League was held at the Temperance Hall last evening to revise the constitution of the league. Mr. William Neill (of the City Bank) was in the chair, and among those present were the Rev. J. Wilkinson, the Rev. George Sutherland, the Rev. F. B. Boyce (secretary of the league), Messrs. A. Torning, B. James, and J. V. Lavers. The first resolution was that the president (Mr. J. H. Goodlet) shall, as soon as practicable after an annual meeting, invite the executive in Sydney of each organisation of temperance societies or lodges to send a representative to the central committee, but it shall not be necessary to delay the business of that committee by reason of the non-acceptance of such invitations. After an animated discussion had taken place, in which Messrs. Wigley, G. D. Clark, Torning, George Perry, and others took part, the resolution was declared carried by a majority of nine. The Rev. F. B. Boyce then moved that each branch shall invite every temperance society or lodge in its neighbourhood to send a representative to its committee. At this stage of the proceedings the Rev. George Sutherland, one of the vice-presidents, entered, to whom the chairman resigned the chair. An amendment practically negativing the resolution was then put and seconded, and the resolution was ultimately rejected. The third resolution, raising the amount of subscription from a shilling to half-a-crown, was moved by the secretary, and negatived by a narrow majority. The meeting then adjourned.

The monthly meeting of the Randwick Debating Association was held in the Town Hall of the borough on Monday evening last. Mr. J. Coulter, the vice-president, occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen, probably owing to the fact of the establishment of a musical branch in connection with the association, and that a special programme had been arranged by the honorary secretary for the enjoyment of the members that evening. During the evening a resolution was carried on the motion of Mr. W. Bethune, for steps to be taken for the purchase of a pianoforte. The possession of such an instrument will doubtless largely conduce to the pleasure derivable from the holding of the periodical musical re-unions the society has in view. The vocal and instrumental part of the programme consisted of pianoforte solos and songs given by the lady and gentlemen members, and these were supplemented by readings and recitations. At the close of the proceedings the chairman announced the subject for debate on next Monday evening, which refers to all applications for the renewal of public-house licenses in the county of Cumberland being subjected to the test of local option.

The number of weekday visitors at the Art Gallery during June was 12,111, an average of 484 per day for 25 days. The number of visitors for five Sundays was 10,181, or an average of 2036 per Sunday. Total number for the month, 22,292. It may be mentioned that Sunday, the 15th, being a very wet day, the visitors only numbered 27.

Last Saturday (Coronation Day) was observed according to time-honoured custom at the Liverpool Asylum, where the lame, blind, and halt received an extra good dinner of rost beef and pudding, with a pint of ale, a new pipe, and some tobacco. The messroom was suitably decorated with evergreens, while the Union Jack floated from the dome. Mr. Charles Tattersall was again present, and before the banquet commenced proposed her Majesty's health, together with a number of other toasts, including the healths of the various officials of the institution. Then some of the old men, by special permission, arranged for an impromptu concert, which passed away the afternoon very comfortably. The spectators included several ladies, who were considerably interested at what they witnessed. The generally healthy and happy appearance of the 700 or 800 inmates was a matter of general comment. Coronation Day was not overlooked at the Macquarie-street Asylum, Parramatta. The dining-hall was very tastefully decorated with foliage, flags, and banners with appropriate mottoes. Up aloft was the portrait of her Majesty, and the crown in colours and gold, with "God save the Queen" underneath. The inmates were regaled with a goodly supply of baked beef and potatoes and plum-pudding, as well as a pint of ale; and a fig of tobacco and new pipes were issued to each. The usual loyal toast was received with cheers, as were also those of the manager and Mr. and Mrs. Cunninghame. The dinner was evidently much relished by the inmates, who acted throughout in a very quiet and orderly manner, some indulging in songs for the amusement of the others. The three hundred and odd old ladies at the Hyde Park Asylum spent a very enjoyable day, the beef and pudding being supplied ad lib., and the dining-room decorated handsomely for the occasion. After the distribution of pipes and tobacco, as well as the quaffing of ale, three musicians were introduced, who helped to make matters generally pleasant during the afternoon. A number of ladies were present, including of course Mrs. Hicks, the matron, who was the recipient of many good wishes, during the day, from the aged revellers.

We have been shown a letter received by Mr. W. T. Wright, a gentleman long engaged in squatting pursuits, and now resident in Marrickville, from a resident of his, who is manager of one of the largest stations in Kimberley, Western Australia—a district in which a large amount of capital from New South Wales is invested. The writer, who has had large experience in this colony and in Victoria, says he likes the country where he is better than ever. They have had abundance of rain of late. The lambing last season averaged 94 per cent., and the prospects for the present season were equally good. The sheep were looking well on all the stations. At one station about 70 miles distant, there were 18,000 sheep, all doing splendidly. At Yeeda station they were spending a large amount of money in fencing and other improvements, but he did not think it was good for sheep to get fencing for a time. He considers the chances for investors in the Kimberley district were very good indeed; many of those who had taken up stations there were making money fast. In fact, he speaks in the highest terms of the country generally. The management of many of the stations, however, was bad, having been entrusted to inexperienced persons, who were employed at low salaries, and this had had a mischievous effect upon the industry. The blacks, he says, if not ill-treated, are very docile and useful; they only resent improper treatment from the whites. He had heard of one life only having been taken by the blacks, and in that case the sufferer had himself alone to blame. The writer had had his hut burnt, owing to the excessively luxuriant herbage taking fire, and he had lost his clothes and a portion of his rations. The mosquitoes there were very troublesome, which was always the case where there was much herbage. The mail communication, up to the present, had been very irregular, and they had great difficulty in getting news. There was only a fortnightly mail between Perth and Kimberley, and if one happened to miss, they were a month without a mail.

The Ayrshire cattle which arrived in this port last week from the herd of Messrs. A. and J. M'Farlane, of Dunedin, New Zealand, were sold yesterday, at Kiss' Bazaar. The heifers, of which there were 22, brought a total of 758 guineas, or an average of 34½ guineas each, and the bull Teviot, 7 years old, was sold to Mr. Lindsey, of Dapto, for 113 guineas. The principal buyers of the female cattle were Messrs. Tom Cadell, Evans, Bennett, and Edrop. Mr. M'Mahon, of Ulladulla, purchased a chestnut draught mare, Queen of the Bankers, for 82 guineas.

About 2.30 p.m. on the 29th ultimo a Mrs. Elizabeth Eastguite, wife of Henry Eastguite, blacksmith, residing at 1, Olive-terrace, Hesley-street, Paddington, died in the Sydney Hospital. According to Mrs. Williams, daughter of deceased, it appears that she had been suffering from paralysis and heart disease for some time past, and had been attended by Drs. Marsden and Knaggs, who had prescribed a soothing mixture to be taken every hour, and a liniment for outward application. About 5 p.m. on the 27th June she asked her husband to give her some of the mixture, and in mistake he gave her the liniment instead. A coronial inquiry took place yesterday at the Coroner's Office, and evidence to the foregoing effect was adduced by Henry Eastguite, who said that deceased was 49 years of age, had been married 27 years, and had left a family of three children. She had always been on good terms with witness. The bottle containing the liniment was marked, "For outward application only." The medicine and liniment bottles were kept together on a shelf in the bedroom. On the 27th June witness asked deceased if she would take a teaspoonful of medicine. She said she would, and witness took a bottle from the shelf and poured out a tablespoonful. After she had half taken it, witness noticed that she was apparently choking. Witness set her up in bed, and advised her to swallow it all, as it would relieve her head. There was a fire in the room, but no light, and there was no one but witness and deceased. When witness went to cork the bottle he found he had given her the liniment instead of the medicine. Witness at once went to Dr. M'Neah, but did not procure his attendance at the house. Witness, however, got an emetic from the surgery, and gave it to deceased. She did not vomit. After sending to Dr. Marsden, a message was returned that deceased should be taken to the hospital, and she was accordingly taken there the same evening. He had always lived on excellent terms with deceased. Dr. Marsden stated that he had prescribed a liniment for deceased which contained a highly dangerous poison. It was composed of belladonna, aconite, chloroform, and some compound camphor liniment. Witness had also prescribed a sedative for deceased. Lydia Williams, a married woman, daughter of deceased, having given evidence as to the good terms on which her father and mother lived, Dr. Fox, of the hospital, stated that on the admission of deceased to that institution remedial measures were applied. She died, however, on the evening of Sunday, the 29th June, the cause of death being paralysis, accelerated by the poison she had taken. The jury, after a short discussion, returned a verdict in accordance with the evidence of the last witness.

Senior-sergeant Shankleton has reported to the Coroner that at 3.30 yesterday morning a man named Frederick Ellis, a native of England, aged about 50 years, was found lying dead on his bed, with his clothes on, at 148, Clarence-street, by a fellow-lodger, named John Russell. The latter stated that deceased came to lodge there on the 28th ultimo, arriving there from Hobart Town. On the following morning he complained of a pain in his chest, stating that he was in the habit of taking opium to allay it. About 10 o'clock on Monday evening deceased told Russell that he thought he had taken too much opium, as he felt very unwell since taking it. He then retired to bed. Early next morning Russell heard a rattling noise proceeding from deceased, and on striking a light Ellis was found to have just expired. Ellis is stated to have had no employment, and to have derived his support from a yearly income from home. No doctor had been attending him. An inquest will be held on the body this morning at the South Sydney morgue.

On Monday afternoon a patient named Robert Burns absconded from Prince Alfred Hospital. The man had been admitted seven weeks previously, suffering from an injury to the knee, and had sufficiently recovered to be able to walk about. A few days ago the doctor, while treating another patient suffering also from an injury to the leg, caused the man some pain, whereupon he uttered a scream. Burns, who was looking on at the time, seems to have been considerably affected by this incident, for he took the first favourable opportunity to make his escape good from the institution. No tidings of the unfortunate man have as yet come to hand.

The police at the Christ Church station report that yesterday morning the body of a man was found in the waters of Darling Harbour. As he has not yet been identified we append the following description:—About 27 years of age, five feet six inches high, stout build, fair complexion, light brown hair and moustache, otherwise clean shaved; dressed in dark tweed sac coat, dark brown vest, light tweed trousers, blue and red striped shirt, maroon-coloured necktie, blue braces, and elastic-side boots. A purse, wooden pipe, blue pencil, and a narrow belt were found on the body of deceased. The matter has been reported to the City Coroner.

A suburban correspondent writes to complain of the disgraceful conduct of a number of young men who travel on the Parramatta line by the late trains, and suggests that the railway authorities should take some energetic measures for the suppression of such exhibitions of rowdyism as are to be witnessed on that line, particularly by the late through trains on Saturday nights. It appears that a number of young rowdies were travelling by the 11.25 train on Saturday night to Parramatta, and shortly after the train left Sydney a fight was started, which was continued until the train reached Homebush, when in addition most disgusting and filthy language was used, and a woman whom the larrikins had insulted was very roughly treated by them during the disturbance. Whilst the row was going on there was no sign of a porter, and when Homebush was reached, and the matter was reported to the porter on duty there, he was unable to suppress the row. Sergeant Caywood, of the 3rd Regiment, was in the carriage, and he eventually put a stop to the melee, but not till he had inflicted some chastisement on the unruly young ruffians. Our correspondent suggests that special constables should travel by these trains, whose presence would have a repressive effect on the rowdies who travel by them—especially in the second class carriages.

The London correspondent of the Argus writes on May [illegible]:—"The Rev. Charles Strong has been lecturing in Ayrshire. His subject was 'To Melbourne and Back in Half-an-Hour.' He may possibly amplify his lecture for publication in a magazine form. He is still resident in Helensburg, and is not anxious to accept a charge at all hastily. He has been urged to become the successor of the late Dr. Service, of Hyndlands Church, Glasgow, but has not yielded to the pressure brought to bear upon him."

The Saturday Review, in commenting on the reported annexation of Sarakhs by Russia, says:—"The peculiar importance of Sarakhs does not lie in the fact of its being a very strong place, or being rich and populous, or being the headquarters of warlike tribes, for it is none of the three. It lies in the fact that whosoever possesses it, so to speak, gathers up in his hand all routes to India from the north-west. With the preceding occupation of the Akhal Tekke country, the rectifications of the Persian frontier which have already been made, and the occupation of Merv, the annexation of Sarakhs makes Russia independent altogether of even the connivance of Persia at an Indian campaign, and enables her to extend the line of railway which already pierces the country east of the Caspian to the actual frontier of Afghanistan, from which Sarakhs itself is but a few miles distant and which its district touches. As arranged two or three years ago, the Russo-Persian frontier left a solid block of Persian territory more than a hundred miles long in the way of this communication; the Russian occupation of Sarakhs would do away partially, if not entirely, with that block, and give a straight road, all Russian, all passable easily, and the greater part of it well-supplied, from the Caspian to the Afghan frontier. Not only this, but Sarakhs would give Russia a new and firmer hold on the most populous and fertile part of Khorassan, and would more than ever make Persia her vassal. From Sarakhs to Herat is two days' journey for a not very expert tricyclist; five or six days' walk for a moderately well-girt man. There are no difficulties in the way whatever. At the same time, except as a basis for aggressive movements, the place is of no value to Russia, and there is no conceivable reason why she should occupy it except as such a basis. All beyond and round is Afghan or Persian, and the excuse of masterless tribes who molest Russian territory becomes inapplicable."

A Wellington, N.Z., telegram to the Melbourne Daily Telegraph states—"The Government has received a telegram from the Agent-General in London, Sir Francis Dillon Bell, stating that he has had an interview with the Right Hon. Henry Fawcett, Postmaster-General of Great Britain, on the subject of the despatch of letters by the San Francisco mail. Mr. Fawcett declines to relax the rule now in force, viz., that letters for New Zealand without superscription shall be forwarded by first mail, irrespective of what line, unless the Treasury assents to the alteration, which would entail some loss of revenue. It is highly probable that Sir Dillon Bell will address himself to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the subject."

The Athenæum of May 23 says:—"A new Tripos for modern and mediæval languages has been established at Cambridge University in the amended form, which excludes conversational French and German, and allows a student to specialise in English, French, or German, with their allied mediæval languages. The Senate of the University have removed a long-standing grievance in connection with the Previous Examination required of all students, by sanctioning, in the case of those who prefer it, the substitution for an examination in one of the Greek Gospels of an additional classical paper, and for Paley's 'Evidences' of a paper in elementary logic."

The following is the Sydney Hospital report for the week ended 28th June, 1884:—Admitted, 40 males, 22 females—total, 62; discharged, 37 males, 12 females—total, 49; died, 5 males, 1 female—total, 6; remaining, 162 males, 82 females—total, 244; casualties treated but not admitted, 66.

THE AUSTRALIAN ELEVEN IN ENGLAND.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL TELEGRAM.)

LONDON, June 30.

The Australians commenced a match to-day at Sheffield against the Players of England, when the weather was fine, and the attendance enormous. An excellent wicket was pitched and the ground was in first-rate order. The following comprise the home team:—R. G. Barlow, Lancashire; W. Bates, Yorkshire; J. Briggs, Lancashire; T. Emmett, Yorkshire; J. Grimshaw, Yorkshire; L. Hall, Yorkshire; G. G. Hearne, Kent; E. Peate, Yorkshire; Maurice Read, Surrey; M. Sherwin, Nottingham; G. Ulyett, Yorkshire. The home team won the toss, and Bates and Barlow went to the wickets first. The former, however, was bowled after scoring, and Ulyett joined Barlow. These two got well set together, and for a long time defied all the efforts of the Australian bowlers, Barlow acting on the defensive, and Ulyett making many brilliant hit. After Barlow had made 47 by really scientific cricket he was bowled. Hall took his place and had run up 16 when he was caught. Maurice Read, the next comer, was credited with 31 before he retired, bowled. Briggs came next, and shortly afterwards Ulyett was bowled after a fine innings of 76. Hearne joined Briggs, but did not materially increase the score, being bowled for 3. Grimshaw, the next comer, was bowled before scoring, and was followed by Emmett. Briggs was soon after bowled for 13, and the next two men, Peate and Sherwin, failed to make any stand, being bowled for 2 each. Emmett carrying out his bat for 11. The innings closed for 230. Spofforth was the most successful bowler, taking six wickets for 80; Giffen taking two for 30, and Palmer two for 80. The Australian team then went to the wickets, M'Donnell and Bannerman as usual going in first. Neither of them, however, met with any success, as M'Donnell was almost immediately caught after scoring 2, and Bannerman was bowled for 0. Murdoch and Giffen then filled the vacancies, and made considerable resistance, the latter scoring 31 before he was stumped. Midwinter joined the Australian captain, and when the stumps were drawn the scores stood, Murdoch not out 26, Midwinter not out 7, three wickets being down for 65. The following are the scores:—

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

A shocking casualty has occurred at Cowes, Phillip Island. While most of the inhabitants of the town were at church on Sunday evening the house of Mr. Buckingham caught fire. There was a rush to the scene of the conflagration, but the place was speedily destroyed, and among the debris was found the dead body of Mrs. Buckingham fearfully charred.

The medical student M'Gill, who is suffering from what for want of a better name must be described as a "mysterious malady," was to-day removed to the sanatorium, at Williamstown, as his landlady refused to take him back to her house when the Melbourne hospital committee refused him admission. A fellow-student accompanied him to the sanatorium, firmly convinced, as is the President of the Central Board of Health, that the case has from the first been one of serious chicken-pox. They are now the only occupants of the sanatorium, as Mrs. Barker, whose husband died there, has been discharged from it.

The Mayor, at the request of a deputation from the various temperance organisations, has consented to call a public meeting to consider the question of the entire closing of public-houses on Sundays.

The vice-regal ball in honour of the Queen's birthday was held in the Exhibition building to-night. Elaborate preparations were made for the entertainment of the guests, of whom about 1000 were present, including the officers of H.M.S. Nelson and all the leading citizens. The ball was one of the most successful yet held.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

The Hon. J. Colton, Premier, has telegraphed to the Hon. James Service, stating that the Government of this colony is willing to contribute a portion of the cost of the appointment and maintenance of a High Commissioner of the Western Pacific for the protection of New Guinea, on condition that the subsidy be proportionate to the population of the colony.

The remains of the late Mr. Justice Andrews will be brought from Hobart to Adelaide for interment.

The report of Mr. H. J. Scott, the South Australian agent at the Calcutta Exhibition, was presented at a meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society to-day. It states that the natural products of the colony were well represented, and the products of the Northern Territory attracted considerable attention; but the exhibits, on the whole, were rather small. It also complains that the P. and O. Company lost a wood-working machine from Messrs. Martin and Co., which has not yet been recovered. The report remarks upon the success of the local exhibition, and urges that a still better show should be made at Bombay in 1885. The report further suggests the advisability of the cultivation of the trade in horses between South Australia and India. A large amount of information is given relative to Indian agriculture, jute culture, tobacco, and ghee, and the report points out a large number of articles suitable for export to India.

Great anxiety is expressed relative to the intentions of Victoria regarding the meeting of the intercolonial railway at the Border. Their decision will probably influence the result of the Exhibition Repeal Bill.

The Duke of Manchester left for Melbourne by the steamer Adelaide to-day.

The Carlton footballers sailed for Melbourne by the steamer Adelaide to-day. They were accompanied to the wharf by the Port Adelaide footballers, who heartily cheered them as the steamer moved off. Prior to leaving, the team were entertained at the Town Hall by the Mayor of Adelaide.

LARGE FIRE AT PENRITH.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PENRITH, Tuesday.

A most disastrous fire occurred in High-street, just below Station-street, at about a quarter to 6 o'clock this evening. The fire broke out in the premises occupied by Mr. Martin Purtell, who has been carrying on for some time an extensive cash drapery business. He traded under the style or firm of the Co-operative Drapery Establishment, and had a large stock, which he estimates was worth over £2000. Mr. Purtell, with some of his assistants, was sitting at tea in a room adjoining the shop, and having heard a report he went into the shop, which he found was already in flames, and as the lamp that usually hung from the ceiling was not to be seen, it is presumed that it either burst or fell, and in falling caught some of the goods about the shop. He immediately raised an alarm, and in a very short space of time there could not have been less than 1000 persons present, the majority of whom came with the intention of doing good. Immediately after sufficient people had arrived, all the available tubs, buckets, cans, and in fact everything that would hold water, were brought into use. The premises which were occupied by Mr. Purtell, were of such an inflammable nature that it was deemed advisable not to interfere with them, but to endeavour to save the adjoining premises. On the western side were two very pretty and comfortable weatherboard cottages owned by Mr. Jas. Smith and occupied by two of the railway employees, named respectively Alexander and Affleck. The whole of the furniture, &c., in these premises were quickly removed, and a body of men at once proceeded to keep the place constantly wet. All the doors and windows were quickly removed, and had it not been that the western wall of Mr Purtell's store was composed of ironbark slabs, in lieu of weatherboards, nothing could possibly have saved the cottages, which were within about 6 feet of the burning mass. The whole of Mr. Purtell's property was destroyed with the exception of a few goods which were on the verandah and a few articles of furniture. Mr. Smith's cottages suffered to the extent of £50. Mr. Purtell's shop was owned by Mr. J. J. Paskin, and it was insured in the Commercial Union Fire Insurance Company for £120, and Mr. Purtell's stock was insured for £800 in the same company. The lieutenant of the Salvation Army, with hundreds of other willing hands worked well in arresting the progress of the flames, and also in saving property. Mr. Smith's cottages were insured for about £300 in the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company. Allt's property on the eastern side was untouched. The stock in this shop was insured for £50. The fire has been got well under, and an inquiry will probably be held to-morrow. Mr. Purtell's safe, an Excelsior, with all his papers, has not yet been opened; his cash drawer, with the day's takings, was lost. The total loss by the fire is estimated at £1700.

PUBLIC MEETING AT SILVERTON.

WILCANNIA, Tuesday.

A numerously attended public meeting was held at the Silverton Hotel, Silverton, on Friday last—Mr. Richard Green in the chair—for the purpose of urging on the Government the requirements of the rapidly increasing population of this important mining field. Resolutions were unanimously passed requesting the construction of a telegraph line from Menindie, a distance of 68 miles, and the establishment of a Government post-office; also for the opening of a Government school, there being 100 children of school-going age in the town. The Minister for Mines was to be urged to expedite the issue and granting of leases and the sale of township allotments as conducive to the interests of the district. On the question of water supply, which is of the greatest importance, in view of providing for the coming summer, it was resolved that the attention of the Minister for Public Works be drawn to the urgent necessity of making provisions for the supply of water for the township of Silverton and the Thackaringa mines, and that he authorise Mr. Barlow, the district surveyor, who is now here, to at once report thereon, and give his advice as to the resumption of the station tank, about three miles from here, which is now full of water, or excavating a tank immediately in the vicinity of the township, or of taking any other steps that may be deemed advisable. The question of increased representation was discussed, and the bill now before the House was condemned as unfair to many of the outlying electorates, and especially to this district of Albert. It is estimated that over 2000 men, who are qualified to exercise the franchise, are now residing in the district, of which Silverton is the centre, and that the number bids fair to be doubled or trebled before the next election. It was also decided to forward a list of the resolutions which were passed by the meeting to the member for the district, Mr. Quin, requesting him to represent the matter in the proper quarter.

PARLIAMENT OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

Both Houses of Parliament met to-day, and great interest was taken in the proceedings by the public consequent upon the declaration of the Government policy by the Premier of the new Government. The declaration was made in both Houses, and, of course, to the same effect. In the Legislative Assembly, the Hon. J. Colton, the Premier, spoke in giving the exposition at great length. He deplored the fact that the revenue was £100,000 worse than the former Treasurer had predicted that it would be, and at the end of the financial year the deficit would be £891,000, irrespective of the unexpended balances and excesses on votes which had totalled up considerably under the late Government. The present Ministry feel that taxation must be imposed, and, without going now into details regarding the amount that the Government expected to receive, he would freely state that they would propose a land tax, pure and simple, without exemptions; an income tax exempting under £300 a year. The Government intended to gradually begin with the withdrawal of the subsidies to the district councils and corporation, commencing with the next municipal year, by reducing the amounts at the rate of one-sixth every subsequent year until all the subsidies will be discontinued. One great feature of the Government proposals will be the matter of cheap railways. As the result of the recent visit of the Engineer-in-Chief to Europe and America, the Government have found that they will be able in future to save 20 or 30 per cent. of the cost of making railways. The Government proposed a bold and yet a cautious policy in regard to railway extension, the new lines including, besides the minor ones, one to the north-west from Port Augusta to Phillip's Pond, at a cost of £2500 per mile, and from Petersburgh and the border, to serve Silverton and the Barrier Ranges, a distance of 150 miles, at a cost of £3500 per mile, all built on the narrow gauge; as also a line from the Gott or thereabout to the south-eastern boundary of Queensland. A most important proposition was that to continue the transcontinental line from Port Darwin to Adelaide, and a bill would be introduced empowering the Government to borrow the necessary money, and the work could be done in sections, as most convenient. As to other matters, it is proposed to confine the system of immigration to the introduction of domestic servants and bona-fide agricultural labourers, giving special facilities for passages by ocean steamers. The Government also proposed re-introducing the Education Bill which had been withdrawn last session. One most important matter was their intention to propose to repeal the Jubilee Exhibition Bill, as it was absurd to contemplate schemes which could not be carried out while the finances of the colony were in the present condition. The Government during adjournment had given special attention to the formulation of a land policy, and now proposed their scheme respecting agricultural land as follows:—1. That all interest which has been paid since January, 1879, except the first instalment, be credited as against the purchase money, and that the system of charging interest be abolished. 2. That all selectors under personal or substituted residence may surrender their agreements, and be entitled to new agreements comprising the same area, and at the same price as the surrendered agreements. 3. That all selectors whose selections are mortgaged may, with the consent of the mortgagee, surrender and obtain a new agreement subject to the same mortgage. 4. That any selector may surrender his agreement and lease in lieu thereof for 21 years, without the right of purchase, at a rental to be fixed by the Commissioner of not less than £3 (?) per acre, and based on the valuation of the land, exclusive of improvements. 5. That any persons who have surrendered their agreements under the Act of 1882, and whose selections have not been sold, shall be entitled to a lease, as provided in the preceding paragraph. The Government propose to adopt the policy of their predecessors with reference to the leasing of the land in the South-east as scrub leases, and propose that all improvements which scrub lessees under the 58th section of the Crown Lands Act of 1877, and section 20 of the Crown Lands Amendment Act of 1882, have effected since January 1, 1879, except first payment, be credited against purchase money; but no lessee shall be entitled to this concession unless he shall have personally resided on the land, and shall continue to reside as personal residents. As to the pastoral lands, especially with regard to the land outside of the settled districts, it is proposed that so far as the leases which will be falling in in 1888 are concerned, for all improvements made after the passing of this Act, with the consent of the Commissioner of Crown Lands, the lessees shall be paid on the termination of the leases their then value; and that, at the expiration of the leases, the land shall be offered by auction for leasing in blocks varying in size according to the nature of the country, and as far as possible utilising all the improvements on the ground. It is proposed, as to class 2, which includes all the present lessees, except the renewed 1883 leases, to give—1, fixity of tenure; 2, compensation for the loss of leases, and payment for the improvements if the lease should be resumed during tenancy; 3, payment for improvements whenever made, except fencing which has been already paid for, by reductions in rent on the termination of the lease; 4, all leases to be offered by auction on the termination of the lease. As to the country in the interior for which no application for lease has been granted prior to the passing of this Act, or which at the time may have been forfeited, we propose to give a 35 years' lease, subject to conditions as to stocking and periodical valuations. Of course the first term will be of 14 years, in order to give the lessees who take up the land in the interior an opportunity of stocking; after that the land will be subject to valuation every seven years. Full value will be given for all permanent improvements, and compensation for loss of lease if resumed. The Government will probably make a reservation with regard to some leases in the Northern Territory, which may be required for the growth of sugar, rice, &c. (Mr. Smith: Hear, hear.) We intend to carry on the law with regard to the leases of 1888, and in all probability some of them will have to be cut up when they come to auction. Many of them, on the other hand, are suitable for nothing but pastoral purposes, and are not therefore likely to be cut up. As to federation, he believed the tariff difficulties with Victoria presented a serious difficulty, but, as the best thing under the circumstances, he would introduce the resolutions agreed to last year by the Federal Council. The gold export duty in the Northern Territory will be repealed. After the Premier's speech, Mr. Bray, as leader of the Opposition, spoke at some length. Mr. Ebenezer Ward was elected Chairman of Committees by a majority of eight votes over Mr. Turner, the late occupant of the chair, Mr. Ward being proposed by the Government, and Mr. Turner by Mr. Bray. The House rose about 6 o'clock.

In the Legislative Council a long debate ensued on the statement of the Government policy, and it was adjourned until to-morrow. The Council passed an address of condolence with the Queen in connection with the death of the Duke of Albany.

The reception of the Government policy in both Houses was generally favourable.

The Hon. J. Coles, Commissioner of Lands in the Legislative Assembly, read a telegram which he had received from Mr. Chambers, the leader of the party who were developing the road to the Musgrave Ranges, as follows:—"Charlotte Waters, June 30. We have arrived at Charlotte Waters, all well. We got fresh water in a well 30 miles from the site of well No. 8. After sinking to a depth of 114 feet, the water, which is in sandstone, rose 28 feet in the bore. Water has also been found to exist at Arcollibina, a place 50 miles further to the north-west than this well. Fresh water can be obtained at a depth of 16 feet from the surface, at the rate of 400 gallons per day. This was the sixth well of fresh water which that party had found.

Relative to the Jubilee Exhibition, one of the principal reasons urged by the Government why they will not proceed with the scheme is that considerable doubt exists whether the Victorian Government will meet our intercolonial railway at the Border. Mr. Colton commented upon the fact that Victoria had given no intimation to that effect in her declaration of policy. Mr. Bray assured the House that Mr. Service and the Victorian officials told him that they were certain it was the intention of Victoria to meet South Australia at Dimboola, and he understood that the Victorian line would connect with the South Australian line. He expressed his strong belief that it would be done.

PARLIAMENT OF TASMANIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

HOBART, Tuesday.

Parliament was opened to-day with the usual formalities. The Governor's speech, which was of considerable length, referred to the death of the Duke of Albany, the Recidivists question, and the Sydney Convention, and it said that Parliament would be invited to consider a proposal to form a federal council. The success of the recent loan was noticed, and the speech stated that offers had been submitted to the leading steamship companies with the object of securing a direct steam service with England. Immigration would be continued under an improved system. The railway from Launceston to Fromby would be opened for traffic in February next, and rolling stock would be ordered for the other railways with the exception of what could be made in the colony. Several proposed light lines of railway had been already surveyed, and the survey of others would be shortly proceeded with. Parliament would be asked to adopt measures which would remove the present anomalies in connection with the franchise, and which would materially increase the number of those who were entitled to vote. Parliament would also be asked to more clearly define the powers of the Legislative Council with regard to dealing with money bills so as to secure harmonious co-operation between the two Houses. An amendment of the Public Schools Act and the appointment of an Agent-General for the colony, would also be submitted to Parliament. The revenue for the last year had been the largest that had yet been received, and though there was a decrease in consequence of the remission of certain duties, the Treasurer's estimate had been maintained. Parliament would also be invited to repeal the duties on the importation of sheep and cattle. Bills dealing with the Civil Service, Crown Lands, Roads Construction, Licensing of Public-houses, Volunteers, the employment of women and children in manufactories, and other important measures would also be introduced. The Hon. W. A. B. Gellibrand was elected President of the Legislative Council, in the place of the late Hon. T. D. Chapman.

APPOINTMENT OF A NEW JUDGE IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

The Hon. W. H. Bundey, Q.C., notified to the Government this morning his acceptance of office as third Judge, vacant by the death of Justice Andrews. Mr. Bundey was called to the bar in April, 1865, and his ability speedily brought him an extensive practice, and within seven years he had gained the position of one of our leading practitioners. In 1878 he was raised to the dignity of Queen's Counsel. On the creation of a sixth Minister, he was the first Minister for Justice and Education, and received the title of Honorable on the same day as the late Sir William Morgan. The Hon. W. H. Bundey has been in two Ministries—as Minister of Justice and Education under Sir A. Blyth, and Attorney-General in the Ministry of the late Sir Wm. Morgan. For several years he has been Commodore of the South Australian Yacht Club, and has taken an active interest in all outdoor sports. Altogether, the new Judge is amongst the most popular men of the colony.

PECULIAR DIVORCE CASE IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

This morning, before Mr. Justice Boucaut, the adjourned divorce case of Wein v. Wein was resumed. His Honor said that he was not disposed to make the Supreme Court of the colony a place for the inhabitants of other colonies to come over and get divorces. If this Court pronounced a decision in a case in which it had no jurisdiction, the Supreme Court of the other colonies would be bound to ignore that decree, because the onus was thrown on the courts to be satisfied they had jurisdiction to exercise. The affidavits laid before him had excited in his mind grave suspicions. He would, therefore, report to the Full Court as follows:—"That the marriage is a fraud, contra bonos mores, and contrary to law; that the proceedings intend a fraud on the Court; that the Court was not satisfied with the proof of jurisdiction: that the alleged desertion was by agreement between the parties; that the Court was not satisfied with the proofs of alleged desertion or cruelty; and that no decree should be pronounced between the parties, except on oral evidence in open court."

HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION AT MELBOURNE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Queen's Birthday celebration took place to-day in Victoria. The day had been fixed upon by the Government because of its being Separation Day, and as, under the new Public Service Act, Separation Day is removed from those days which had been appointed for Government holidays; but as the Act does not come into operation this time, the holiday had to be granted to obviate the necessity of holding two holidays. It was therefore arranged that this last observance of Separation Day should be associated with the deferred Queen's Birthday celebration. The weather was fine, though cold, and the holiday, which was general, was greatly enjoyed. The principal outdoor event of the metropolis was the gala that was held by the Melbourne and suburban fire brigades. This took place in the Friendly Societies' Gardens, and about 12,000 persons were present. The demonstration was preceded by a procession, in which 31 fire brigades took part. In the usual competitions the Yarraberg and Simpson's Road brigades were victorious in the principal events. In the course of the day several members of the Ministry visited the grounds, and among them was the Chief Secretary, who undertook to send, on behalf of the brigades, a congratulatory cablegram to her Majesty. In the evening the brigades had a fête in the Exhibition Building.

Under the auspices of the Cyclists' Union, the championship meeting was held on the M. C. C. ground, which was attended by 8000 persons. The leading item on the programme was the five-mile bicycle race, which was won by F. Stokes. As usual there was the Levee at Government House, when a large number of the leading colonists paid their respects to the Acting Governor, Sir Wm. Stawell, and the Consular body, the Clergy, the Judges, the University Council and Senate, and the Military officers were strongly represented. Owing to the intimation that the officers of the Defence Force would be placed in the position which, until the last Levee, was assigned to the Mayor and Corporation of Melbourne, neither the Mayor nor any other member of the City Council attended. The Birthday celebration had, on this occasion, no review associated with it, but the Garrison Artillery had practice at Queenscliff, and there was a big-gun competition on board of the Nelson between the Naval Reserve and the crew of the Cerberus.

COUNTRY NEWS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

The exports of coal for the past week were 36,294 tons.

A very strange death occurred in the lock-up this afternoon. It appears that on Sunday night a man about 56 years of age applied to the lock-up keeper for a night's lodging, which was given him. He could hardly speak, but intimated that rheumatism was the cause of his prostration. In the morning he was worse, so Dr. Richard Harris, the health-officer, was sent for, but could get no information from the man as to his complaint, and the doctor gave his opinion that the man was an imbecile. He gradually became worse, and Dr. Morgan was sent for, who found him in a dying state, and suffering apparently from urinic poisoning. Upon examination the lower portion of his abdomen, &c., was found to be entirely eaten away with a cancer and the body partially decomposed. His death took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Shortly before his death he gave his name as William Carlson, a miner, 59 years of age, and a member of the Church of England. No inquest will be held, the medical officer certifying as to the cause of death.

This afternoon one of the carters in the employ of Messrs. Wood Brothers met with a painful accident through falling from the dray which he was about to start with. He is still insensible.

The borough councils of Wallsend and Plattsburg held a joint meeting last night to consider the action of the Government in having promptly caused a gratuitous prosecution for undermining at Tighe's Hill when a question without notice was being asked in the Assembly, while the ratepayers have had to expend a large amount of money in law proceedings for a similar purpose in Brookstown without result. A resolution was unanimously carried to the effect that the attention of the Minister for Mines and Examiner for Coalfields be drawn to the fact of the continuance of the undermining of the main and other roads from Wallsend to Newcastle.

A strong agitation has commenced in Wallsend for the erection of a telephone exchange there, in connection with Newcastle.

A deputation from the Newcastle Borough Council was arranged last night to interview the Minister again, on Friday week, upon the sanddrift question.

The weather is fine again, but cold.

BATHURST, Tuesday.

An inquest was held to-day before Mr. Benjamin Lee, on the body of Violet May Player, 11 years of age, who was accidentally shot dead on the previous day by Philip Bremner alias Creith, who was before the Court in custody. After hearing the evidence the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the prisoner, who had fired a gun, had been guilty of gross carelessness, but the Coroner said he could not accept the decision in that shape, whereupon the jury found that the deceased came by her death from a gun-shot wound inflicted by the prisoner, who did not exercise sufficient caution when handling the gun, and that he was guilty of manslaughter; and added a rider to the effect that they thought John Creith, in whose house the accident occurred, was deserving of severe censure for leaving loaded firearms in an insecure place. Bremner was then committed for trial for manslaughter, bail being allowed in the sum of £80.

At the School of Arts last night Mr. Hamlet, who lecture under the auspices of the Board of Technical Education delivered an address on chemistry as applied to agriculture. Mr. E. YOUNG, Tuesday.

A large and representative meeting was held in the Council-chambers last night, the Mayor in the chair, to consider what steps should be taken to have a demonstration at the opening of the new Public school, which will be ready for occupation in the course of a few weeks. Great dissatisfaction was expressed that neither the Minister for Education nor any other member of the Ministry can attend to perform the ceremony, which is felt as a slight to the district. In the absence of replies from the members for the district, the Mayor was requested, by resolution, to open the school, and all the public bodies and principal residents have expressed their willingness to assist. The children from the schools in the neighbourhood are to be invited, and will be entertained at a monster picnic, and an application will be made to have the day proclaimed a Government holiday for the district.

At a meeting of the Borough Council which was held on Thursday it was resolved to commence tree-planting in the principal streets, and a sub-committee was appointed to make arrangements as to the tree-guards and obtaining suitable trees.

The events in connection with the ploughing matches which are to take place to-morrow and Thursday are well filled. The ground on which the contests are to be held has been lent by the Mayor, and is in the Foxborough paddock.

The Municipal Council sat yesterday and to-day hearing the appeals against the rate assessment. There have been about 70 appeals altogether.

The weather is cold and frosty.

ALBURY, Tuesday.

The coroner's inquest which was commenced on last Saturday, on the recent fire at Devene's Hotel, on the Gerogery-road, terminated to-day. About a dozen witnesses gave evidence, but their testimony did not in any way prove in what manner the fire had originated, and the jury accordingly returned a formal verdict to the effect that there was nothing to show the cause of the conflagration.

Heavy frosts have prevailed during the past three nights.

MASONIC.

According to ancient custom, Lodge Woolloomooloo, No. 4 on the register of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales, held its annual meeting, on which occasion the lodge was well attended, as the important ceremony of installation of officers was to be carried out by Past Deputy Grand Master Bro. Captain Neitenstein. The lodge having been constitutionally opened at 7.30 p.m., and the routine business completed, P.D.G.M. Bro. Captain Neitenstein installed Bro. John Scott as W.M., and invested the following officers:—Bro. A. Buchanan, S.W.; Bro. C. H. Hampson, J.W.; Bro. W. Walpole, treasurer; Bro. T. J. M'Cormick, secretary; Bro. C. E. Little, S.D.; Bro. F. M'Mahon, J.D.; Bro. C. Carvasio, I.G.; Bro. W. H. Garrick, tyler. The installation ceremony was rendered more impressive by the assistance of Bro. Lloyd, who conducted the musical portion of the ceremony. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet room at 9.30, when W.M. Bro. Scott took the chair, surrounded by a number of Grand Lodge officers, W.Ms., and P.Ms. The cloth having been removed, the W.M. proposed the toasts of "The Queen," "The Grand Lodge of New South Wales, and all Sister Grand Lodges throughout the World." In replying to the latter Bro. Neitenstein said that he was pleased to inform them that the Grand Lodge of New South Wales was making rapid progress. On the following evening, Tuesday, the 30th lodge hailing under the Grand Lodge of New South Wales would be inaugurated and duly dedicated at Balmain, to be called "Lodge Pacific." In Monday's Sydney Morning Herald he noticed the report of the Ophir Lodge, E.C., at Orange, and among their festivities they duly honoured the three constitutions, E.C., S.C., I.C. Well, he admired their devotion to even so small a portion of the vast brotherhood of freemasonry, but the brethren forming the Grand Lodge of New South Wales took a broader view, and claimed universal freemasonry as part and parcel of the fraternity. When facts and figures came to be analysed, they would find that the three constitutions of Great Britain were but a small factor of the glorious institution whose influence was felt over the whole world. Being the grand representative of the Grand Lodge of Washington, he should report to that grand lodge the friendly manner in which he had been received by every daughter lodge of the Grand Lodge of New South Wales. Bro. Neitenstein then proposed the health of the Worshipful Master and officers of Lodge Woolloomooloo, which was responded to by the W.M., S.W., J.W., treasurer, and secretary. The W.M. then, on behalf of the lodge, presented Bro. T. J. M'Cormick with a handsome silver cruet, elegantly ornamented, on which the following inscription was engraved:—"Presented to Secretary Bro. T. J. M'Cormick for services rendered to Lodge Woolloomooloo, No. 4, N.S.W.C." The presentation was suitably acknowledged by the recipient, and the W.M. proposed the toast of the "Installing Master," to which Bro. Captain Neitenstein replied in a lengthy and instructive speech. Several other toasts followed, and a pleasant evening was spent ere the brethren separated.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

AUSTRALIANS V. SURREY.

As this was the first appearance of the colonial eleven in London, the match created great interest, and on the first day at Kennington Oval there were over 10,000 people on the ground. Before leaving the hotel in the morning it was determined to rely upon the same team as at Sheffield Park and Oxford. Surrey got together almost their best eleven, the only notable absentees being K. J. Key, who was playing for his University at Oxford, and Henderson, the youth who did so well in 1883, and who was not in the best of health. The weather was dull on the opening day, but the wicket was somewhat fiery. Murdoch won the toss, and sent in Bannerman and M'Donnell to face the bowling of Barratt and Jones. The start was a bad one for the Australians. With the score at 12, Barratt beat and bowled Bannerman; and Murdoch, who followed, was clean bowled by the third ball he received. Up to this period of the tour the Australian captain had shown nothing like his true form. Giffen joined M'Donnell, who was batting with unusual steadiness. Jones had been bowling remarkably well, and very few runs were made off him. Giffen made a splendid drive over the reserved stand for 4, and was then bowled by Barratt for 19. Blackham stayed with M'Donnell until the score had reached 73. Here Blackham was caught at deep mid-on, and with eight runs added, M'Donnell was well caught deep behind the bowler for a finely played 37. Bonnor, in rushing out to drive Barratt, was easily caught at short slip, and six wickets were down for 82. Scott and Midwinter were then together, and matters might have gone very badly with the Australians had Wood, the wicket-keeper, taken an easy chance of running out Scott. As it was, the mistake proved a most serious one for Surrey. Scott and Midwinter played admirable cricket, and thoroughly revived the hopes of their side. The latter was content to play quite a defensive game, and left Scott to do nearly all the scoring. Despite changes of bowling, the total was up to 134 before Midwinter was smartly taken at short slip for a capital 26. Since the fall of the sixth wicket 72 runs had been added—a most valuable stand. Palmer followed in, and the score rose at a good pace. More changes were tried, and then at 191 Scott was easily caught on the off side for 71, an innings of immense value, played at a time when runs were sadly needed. By this performance Scott has thoroughly justified his place in the team. Except for a difficult chance at c and b late in his innings little fault could be found with Scott's batting. His chief hits were eleven fours, a three, and five twos. Boyle and Palmer were each bowled, and the innings closed for 195—a much larger total than at one time seemed probable. Surrey began batting at 20 minutes to 5 with Abel and Diver, the bowling being shared by Giffen and Palmer. Diver was bowled without scoring, but when Shuter joined Abel, runs were put on at a great pace, and I fully expected a good match. As Giffen came in for severe punishment, he gave way to Spofforth at 46, and the score was up to 68 before Abel was caught at point for a brilliant 35. After the fall of Abel's wicket there was a remarkable change in the game. Boyle went on for Palmer, and at 79 no fewer than four wickets fell. W. W. Read was caught at the wicket, Maurice Read was taken at mid-on, Roller was caught at short slip, and Shuter ran himself out. Thus in a very few minutes Surrey had completely lost the advantage they had gained in the early part of the innings. I need say very little about the remainder of the play. Spofforth bowled fast and pitched short, so that the batsmen really could not do anything with him. Bowden was caught at point. Morton played a ball tamely in Midwinter's hands at third man, and Wood and Barratt were soon bowled, the innings closing for the poor total of 97. It will be seen that Boyle has a very fine analysis. With the close of the innings stumps were drawn for the day.

Surrey's poor performance took a great deal of interest out of the match, as it was generally thought they could never recover their lost ground. Notwithstanding the one-sided nature of the game, there were over 6000 spectators on the second day. The ground bumped even more than on the Monday, and Spofforth again bowled very fast, and at times flew about in quite a dangerous manner. In a minority of 98, Surrey began their second innings with W. W. Read and Abel to the bowling of Spofforth and Boyle. Alexander fielded as substitute for Midwinter, who had strained his leg. At 17, Read was given out caught at slip, though the ball certainly appeared to go off his arm, and he was much dissatisfied with the decision. This commenced a series of disasters. Shuter was caught by the wicket-keeper, standing back, and Abel, from a bumpy ball, was taken at point. Diver and Maurice Read put a rather better appearance on the game for Surrey, and the former hit with great vigour. At 62, however, he was splendidly caught at long-on by Bonnor, who ran in some distance, and took the ball not more than a foot from the ground. Roller, Maurice Read, and Jones left in quick succession, and it seemed quite likely that Surrey might not save the single innings defeat. However, this disgrace was averted by Bowden and Morton, and although the latter played in very ugly style, he gave far more trouble than had some of the cracks who preceded him. Bowden batted in pretty form and some of his hits were clean and hard. Palmer went on for Boyle at 124, and caught and bowled Bowden, who had made 32. Wood and Barratt were quickly disposed of, and the innings closed for 144, leaving the Australians only 47 to get to win. Bannerman and M'Donnell began the batting, and hit so freely that it seemed likely the runs would be made without the loss of a wicket. Bannerman made his first 17 while M'Donnell was only scoring a single. At 32, Abel and Jones went on, and both batsmen were dismissed, M'Donnell being caught and bowled, and Bannerman clean bowled. Then Scott and Giffen hit off the required number of runs, and the Australians gained a most creditable victory by eight wickets. So ended a match, in which the Australians, at one time, had none the best of the play, but one which they turned into a success by great pluck and perseverance. Next week I shall have to deal with the match against the Marylebone Club, and I now append the full score and analysis of the Surrey match:—

WAGGA WAGGA COURSING CLUB.

WAGGA WAGGA, TUESDAY.

At a meeting of the Coursing Club committee, held last night, it was decided that a meeting should be held on the 13th and 14th of next month. The first stake to be for 32 dogs, £5 5s. each, with £25 added by the club, the winner to receive £100, the runner-up £30; two dogs £10, and four dogs, £5 each. It was also decided to have a 16-dog stake, the dogs to be the bona-fide property of the members of the club, to be nominated by ladies at £2 2s., with a bracelet, value £25, added; the first dog to receive £15 and the bracelet; the runner-up, £10; and two dogs £4 each. About £14 was promised in the room towards the bracelet and Messrs. L. Gormley, M'Alister, and Phillips guaranteed to collect the balance of the £25. A sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Gormley, Mitchelmore, Gowland, and the honorary secretary, S. Hawkins, was appointed to arrange the details. The stakes committee will provide shelter for hares on the course, and immediate arrangements will be made for the purchase of hares. At the conclusion of the meeting notice of motion was given by one of the members in the following terms:—"In accordance with No. 32, code of rules, I shall ask my fellow-committeemen to call upon Mr. T. H. Cummins, steward and committee-man, to resign his offices in the club, seeing that the steward disqualified the dog entered by him at the late meeting as belonging to him, not by any mistake on his part—such dog Flirt being proved, on his own showing, as not having belonged to him, as he failed to act as he said he would act to the stewards."

AMALGAMATION OF COURSING CLUBS.

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

It has been decided to amalgamate the Australian, Fitzroy, and West Bourke Coursing Clubs, and the first joint meeting will be held at the Werribee Park on the 25th instant and the following days.

PEDESTRIANISM AT GRAFTON.

GRAFTON, TUESDAY.

Another spring race, of 150 yards, has been made between T. A. Noud, of Grafton, and Thomas Ellem, of South Grafton, for £60 a-side, to be run on August 2. Half of the amount of the stakes has been deposited. It is reported that the match between Noad and Bray, of Casino, will not come off, in consequence of Bray declining to run, as he had not been consulted in any way prior to the match being made. The second deposit was to have been made to-day, and, according to the articles, either party failing to make the deposit forfeits all previous deposits.

FOOTBALL.

SOUTH ADELAIDE V. EAST SYDNEY.

The South Adelaide team played the third match of their New South Wales tour yesterday, on the Association Cricket Ground, their opponents being the first twenty of the East Sydney Club. The weather was very suitable for football, but there was a rather sparse attendance. With the exception that Fitzgerald, Golby, and Oatey were substituted for Bushby, Noese, and Driffield, the Adelaide team was composed of the same players that met New South Wales last Saturday. A close and exciting struggle was anticipated, as the East Sydney twenty was deemed exceptionally strong; but those who expected such a result were disappointed, for a more unexciting football contest at the Australian game has been rarely witnessed in Sydney, the visiting players—to use a football phrase—running completely over the East Sydney representatives. The Adelaide men winning the toss decided to kick to the southern goal, and for about ten minutes after the ball was set in motion the players were pretty evenly matched, the leather being generally in middle of the ground. As the men became warm at their work, the superiority of the visitors began to manifest itself, and the ball was gradually forged ahead towards the East Sydney goal, which should have been carried several times in the next 10 minutes. Oatey marked to Eames, who missed the goal from a somewhat difficult angle, and then Middleton had a shot, which fell short of the mark. Downes once saved the East Sydney goal by a fine rush, and Sibley also averted danger by a good piece of play. Once the ball threatened the South Australian headquarters, but H. Smith, by a grand run, took the ball to the other end of the ground, where a series of "little marks" by the Adelaide men occurred right in front of the East Sydney goal. From one of these Oatey tried to kick a goal but failed, the distance being easy and the angle not difficult. Time after time the East Sydney citadel narrowly escaped capture, the inaccurate kicking of the attacking forces losing many fine chances of scoring. A few of the East defenders worked hard, M'Harg, Maher, Downes, and Gordon being conspicuous for their fine play. Whenever the ball was sent to a safe distance from the East Sydney stronghold it was quickly taken back again, the well-organised backing-up, and the excellent passing of the ball by judiciously-placed "marks," of the Adelaide players baffling our men. Bushell and Fry obtained marks within kicking range, but failed to send the ball in the right direction. Once Oatey passed to Middleton, who made an excellent attempt, the ball hitting the post and bounding back. After many unsuccessful shots, at last Fry managed to do the trick, sending the ball out of a mass of players through the posts. From that till half-time East Sydney were compelled to act almost entirely on the defensive, and it is wonderful that several more goals were not kicked. Bushell had three chances, and Eames and Fry had each another. On the game being resumed after 10 minutes' adjournment the East Sydney played in much improved form, and twice nearly carried the opposing goal. Sibley obtained a mark about 40 yards' distance, and made a fine kick, but unluckily the ball touched the hands of one of the opposing side before going through the posts, and in about a minute after Sibley had a second attempt, which was not successful. This temporary advance of the East Sydney seemed to inspire the visitors to greater exertion, and from that time till the end of the game the contest was confined to East Sydney quarters. The visitors played well together and unselfishly, and so persistent was their attack upon the East Sydney goal that it was solely owing to their loose and inaccurate kicking that it was not carried half-a-dozen times. Golby missed an easy chance. Bushell neglected to score twice or thrice. Middleton had two shots in less than a minute, and J. Mehrtens, the captain, was also seized with the prevailing want of direction in kicking. No further goals were kicked; but during the last half of the play South Adelaide scored no less than 14 behinds. The result of the game was—Adelaide, 1 goal and 23 behinds; East Sydney, 3 behinds. The visitors played well together, their marking was good, but their kicking was exceedingly wild and ineffective. Bushell played well, though somewhat roughly, and Oatey, Middleton, J. Mehrtens, Rowley, Smith, and Colsby also did good service. The East Sydney men played throughout in a disorganised manner, their kicking was indifferent save that of M'Harg, Downes, and Sibley, and their marking and picking up of the ball was very clumsy. Those who played best, excluding the abovenamed three players, were O'Neil, Munro, Maher, and Gordon, though the last-named kicked very erratically at times. Mr. C. Beal acted as central umpire, and gave entire satisfaction in the discharge of the onerous duties attached to that office.

UNIVERSITY V. BALMAIN.—These two clubs met for the first time this season on Saturday last, on Moore Park. Both put a strong team into the field, and, after a fast game, the representatives of Alma Mater secured an easy victory of 10 points (one goal and three tries) to nothing. The winners were captained by C. Tange, C. Hawkins leading the transmarine heroes. The former winning the toss, chose the southern goal, and the game was started by C. Cameron kicking off for Balmain. The ball was immediately sent back into Balmain quarters, where, notwithstanding the efforts of Dean, Rae, and others, it was kept until Wood, obtaining a show, sent the ball over the Balmain posts with a magnificent drop-kick. The University playing well together still kept their opponents very busy defending their goal, which they did with great valour and determination until Wood got an opening and was again to the fore with a touch-down. The kick, an easy one, was entrusted to P. Flynn, who failed to obtain the coveted goal. No more score was made by either side up to half-time, but shortly after the resumption of the game Neill with a fine piece of dribbling took the ball into southern regions, and Shaw, following up well, obtained second try for the University. A very difficult kick was given to Jones, who did not lift the ball off the ground. Some pretty dribbling by the 'Varsity skipper again put the Balmain on the defensive, and Rae, with a strong run, relieved his comrades, but only for a time, as Tange with a nice run took it back again, and the Balmain were forced down. Fuller with a good run and kick sent the ball into 'Varsity quarters, but bounding against a spectator it was brought back again, and was soon in Balmain regions, who were shortly after again forced down. The University still pressed their opponents very hard, and Neill, getting away, obtained the third try for the blue and gold. Baylis made a splendid attempt at goal from a very difficult kick, the ball just falling short. Soon after the Balmain were forced down, but W. Cameron and Rae, with some good running and passing, compelled the 'Varsity to act in like manner. Time was called a few minutes after, and the University were thus left easy winners, having had the best of the game all through.

The following Rugby footballers have been selected to represent Queensland in the forthcoming matches, to be played against New South Wales:—P. Roberts, H. Pritchard, G. Pratten, A. Fess, T. Pratten, J. Sanderson, A. Hickson, W. Shiels, F. Ransome, T. Bond, F. Baynes, H. Durham, T. Eddison, M. H. Robinson. Emergencies: S. Pritchard, F. Hargrave, and F. Snell.

Two teams from the Lands Department, gleaned from the clerical and professional sections of the department, met at Moore Park on the 27th ultimo, the result being that the draftsmen had once more to acknowledge the supremacy of the Ministerial side of the office. The contest was marked by very fierce play, and it was only after a desperate struggle that the Ministerialists managed to get a touch-down, which they failed to convert into a goal, although Kiposx made a splendid effort for it. The draftsmen could not score, and were defeated by two points to nil. It is unnecessary to particularise any of the players as having distinguished themselves, as all did their best to win the game.

The second Redfern and Albion first teams contested together on the former club's ground, at Moore Park, last Saturday afternoon, which resulted after a very hard-fought game in a win for the Redferns by 2 points to nil. John Mulcahy obtained the touch for the winners by an excellent piece of play, but was unable to score a goal, although he made a good attempt. Coghlan, Negus, Lovett, and Barlow played excellent, as did Foster, Kipper, Smith, and Harrison for the losers.

The Victoria and Manly Junior Football Clubs met at Manly on Saturday last, and played a very fast and exciting game, which resulted in a victory for the former by 11 points to nine. For the winners, W. Jacobs, Joseph Merrick, Rowley, and G. Wallis played well.

The following is the final selection of the team to represent the Sydney Club in its match with the South Adelaide representatives now in Sydney:—Baker, Ballhausen, Croch, Davis, Fairfax, Finn, Fitzpatrick, Greer (captain), Graham, Grainger, F. Green, Hedger, Jones, M'Kellar, Oswald, Peirce, Parkinson, Sullivan, Trevor-Jones, and Windridge. Emergencies—Lee, Butcher, Chambers. These players are requested to be on the ground at 2.30 sharp.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

CARCOAR, TUESDAY.

At Lane's battery, Gally Swamp, Digby and party have finished crushing a parcel of 87½ tons of stone for a yield of 95oz. 10dwt. of gold. The quartz has been taken from between the 40-feet and 70-feet levels. A drive has been started, and the party are now stoping on the reef with a 40-feet back cut. The same battery has started on a parcel of 300 tons of stone, which has been raised by Crouch and party, whose claim is situated in Mullaly's paddock. Since the late rains the Junction Gold-mining Company have put 300 tons of stone through their battery, which is driven by a turbine wheel, realising 24wt. 12gr. of gold to the ton. Since the Junction Company have started crushing on the new reef, which is 20 feet in thickness, they have obtained most favourable results.

NYMAGEE, TUESDAY.

The output for the week ending June 28 was 302 tons of smelted ore, producing equal to 50 tons fine copper; refined, 43 tons; despatched, 37 tons.

The manager of the Wesley Tin-mining Company, Limited, reports:—"The yield of ore for the week ended 28th June, was 6 tons."

The manager of the Girilambone Copper-mining Company, Limited, reports:—"A great change in the shaft. I have struck the flat floor, the ground under which is highly charged with yellow ore; it appears to be the top of a new lode."

The mining manager of the Brickwood Tin-mining Company, Tingha, reports under date June 28:—"The wash in the deep lead is 2 feet in depth, and a great deal firmer than what we had before, there being a cake of bake sand above it, which is a good sign. In the shallow workings the tributors are all raising washdirt, and I shall start washing for them next Monday."

The mining manager of the Nymagee Copper Mining Company reports for the week ending 21st June, as follows:—"Barton's Shaft: The cutting of the chamber at the 69-fathom level is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, and will be completed in about three weeks from date, when I shall commence driving a crosscut west to intersect the lode, which I expect to reach within 40 feet of the shaft. Fifty-two-fathom Level: The north end has been extended a further distance of 11 feet, making in all 361 feet from shaft. This drive is improving fast, and will soon be in good ore, there being a good lode in the winze, about 30 feet beyond the present end. The winze in section 14 has been sunk a further depth of 16 feet 6 inches, making a total of 65 feet below the level. The back stope in section 11 continues to look splendid, and the rich sulphuret ore appears to be extending further south than where first intersected in the level. Forty-fathom Level: The back stope in section 14 continues much the same in appearance, and is yielding good sulphuret ore quite equal to any yet raised. I shall soon commence stoping in section 17. Pope's Shaft: In the 70-feet level I have sunk 12 feet on the gray ore recently discovered, and which is rich in quality, but appears to be dipping rapidly to the north. Prospecting Shaft, section 8: The south end in the 147-feet level has been extended a further distance of 31 feet 6 inches, making in all 293 feet 6 inches from shaft. During the month I have passed through ore here, but so far the lode is rather poor and patchy. I have now commenced sinking a winze in this level on a little grey ore, which is high in percentage for copper. Smelting Works: During the month 838 tons of ore have been raised, and 1170 tons smelted producing equal to 200 tons fine copper; despatched 146 tons. I may here mention that I was obliged to ease off raising ore in the last month, having raised so much more than was smelted during the preceding month."

The mining manager of the Victory Gold-mining Company, under date 11th ultimo, reports:—"The stopes are yielding the usual quantity of crushing stuff. The winze at No. 3 level was sunk 8 feet—total, 16 feet; the reef is much broken, but the formation is of a promising character. At No. 2 level the winze is down 7 feet; this formation is soft and thickly intermixed with heavy mundic leaders. There are 270 tons at surface. The managing director, under date 30th ultimo, telegraphed as follows:—'Have 900oz. amalgam from plates and ripples, 180 tons through. Finish crushing about Tuesday next.' The secretary reports that the crushing will be of about 360 tons quartz."

The mining manager of the Alexandra Hill Gold-mining Company, under date 14th June, reports:—"During the past fortnight the bottom level was driven 15 feet—total, 77 feet. The ground is hard and reef pinched. The winze was sunk 19 feet—present depth, 83 feet. Here the stone looks well. There are 56 tons in paddock. The secretary reports that the managing director telegraphed, under date 30th ultimo: 'Crushing started Saturday; looks for 1½oz. About 70 tons to go through.'"

The mining manager of the Red Hill Amalgamated Gold-mining Company, Tambaroora, reports, under date of June 28, as follows:—"Since my report of the 21st the north main drive at the 230-feet level has been extended 4 feet, making total length 87 feet, and the tramway has been laid to the end of same. The south drive has been lengthened 6 feet, making the present length from crosscut 51 feet. Backstoping operations have been carried on as usual. The vein in the north backstopes, 30 feet above main vein and 40 feet from upcast shaft, is now only 3 inches thick. The drive being put in on No. 2 leader at the 200-feet level, 10 feet have been driven. In the drive north on the No. 2 vein, at the 230-feet level, 10 feet have also been driven. Stone raised for this week from the two veins of leader, 21 tons, making total quantity at grass 42 tons."

The mining manager of the Prince of Wales and Old Poverty Company, Tarnagulla, reports, under date of June 28, as follows:—"The main drive has been driven 20 feet for the week, 34 feet for the fortnight; total distance west, 217 feet. We have got into a decided change of country, the ground being now much softer, and well charged with mundic."

The mining manager of the Great Extended Gold-mining Company, Limited, under date June 28, reports:—"The battery was idle while the steel rails were being laid. This job was commenced June 15, and finished on June 18. Since then (nine days) I have put through the battery 144 tons of dirt, for a return of 107oz. of gold. During the fortnight the west lead level was driven 45 feet, the main east level 42 feet, and the crosscut south of shaft 30 feet."

The plumbago mines at Mount Bopple are at length likely to be fully developed under a co-operative system (says the Maryborough Chronicle). Mr. C. S. Drain, of Tiaro, who has persistently adhered to a well-grounded belief in the richness and extent of the graphite deposits which he had the good fortune to discover in Mount Bopple, recently visited Brisbane, and entered into arrangements for the formation of a company to work the lode. His efforts met with a very encouraging reception, and it is highly probable that the company will be formed and commence work at an early date. In the meantime, Mr. Drain is complying with the rather harsh exactments of the Mineral Lands Act by keeping the required labour on the ground and working the mine. Several shipments of the plumbago have been sent to England, but it is probable that the projected company will not seek a permanent market there for some time, but look to the colonial demand for an outlet for their product. At present plumbago is largely imported to the colonies from England at double the cost that the Bopple proprietors can supply an equally good article. We understand that a project is on foot for the establishment of smelting works and steel factory near Brisbane, and if it eventuates successfully a large demand for plumbago will arise there, which it should be the special function of the Bopple mine to supply.

LONDON WOOL AND PRODUCE SALES.

Wool.—Writing on the 20th May, Messrs. Buxton, Ronald, and Co. report that 207,318 bales had been catalogued, and 157,500 remained to be catalogued. The quantity bought in up to yesterday comprised 17,900 bales. Since the close of the first week, when a better attendance had been secured, all classes of buyers have continued well represented; the tone of the market has likewise acquired greater steadiness, with latterly a proportionately smaller total bought in from day to day. With regard to merino wool, all descriptions have not been affected alike. Fleece-washed, apart from occasional superfine lots of clothing character, has not improved its position; choice Port Phillip worth 2s 6d to 3s last sales, meeting with a restricted demand, while ordinary to fair parcels sell irregularly at the decline of 5 per cent. announced at the outset. Good combing scoureds have been scarce, but show no recovery from quotations at the outset, whereas the faultier descriptions of some bulk, often neglected in March, are now generally well supported by home buyers at par to ½d per lb. above the currency then prevalent. Wasty clothing sorts sell less satisfactorily. For greasy wools, the tendency of the market has been in the same direction. Thus, while fair to good Port Phillip and New Zealand may be bought at ½d per lb. less money than last sales, medium parcels of Sydney and Queensland growth in dry condition, and fairly free from fault, attract increased attention. Lambs, washed or in grease, when free from fault and of decent character, are well competed for, but scoured and faulty greasy sorts may be had on easier terms. Crossbreds of good half to quarter bred grade are in excellent request at full March currency, or say opening rates, whereas medium and irregular parcels, ruling the first week from 8½d to to 10d, are less wanted at fully ½d per lb. decline from the opening. Coarse qualities of good lustre sell readily at steady prices. Cape wools have hardly varied. The assortment so far submitted in the catalogues has comprised very little above ordinary to fair style, and for the most part values must still be quoted 5 per cent. below last series. Greasy Natal is well competed for on about the same basis. The sum total would therefore appear to be that buyers are fairly numerous, exhibiting on the whole more disposition to operate than they did at the outset, while less difference exists now than last series, between a medium and a good article. More than one-half of the available quantity has been offered up to date, and though reports from manufacturing centres still testify to a quiet feeling in trade, there is fair ground for expecting continued steadiness in values. On the resumption of the sales after the Whitsuntide recess on the 4th proximo, about 95,000 bales will still remain for disposal. On the 22nd May Messrs. J. T. Simes and Co. write:—Since commencement of these present auctions, on 29th April, 230,700 bales, including to-day's catalogues, have been offered; of these about 19,000 bales have been bought in. The state of market reported on opening sales has so far preserved a firm condition; this is, however (as mentioned in our memo. of 29th April) at a somewhat lower standard of values than that which ruled at last auctions in February and March—in fact, prices at present current are decidedly low, more especially for South African wool in scoured condition and unwashed Natals; fleece-washed being in rather better demand. Australian wools of good sound combing character are well competed for, and the market has been tending decidedly in favour of sellers during progress of sales. Unwashed wools have during last few days been assisted by American demand; probably about 3000 bales have been taken in this direction. Inferior and faulty wools, whether scoured, fleece-washed, or in grease, do not realise fairly reasonable expectations; altogether more than half the quantity sold has gone for export. Prices paid this season at auction sales in Australia have been about on a par to ½d, in some cases 1d, higher than present value here, showing considerable loss on "bought" wools.

The New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company report under date May 23:—Tallow: For the two public auctions held during the past fortnight 2794 casks Australian and New Zealand were catalogued, but only 1547 of these found purchasers under the hammer, a moderate quantity being subsequently placed by private contract. The demand for mutton has again been extremely quiet, and business has been well nigh impracticable, except at a further considerable reduction in price. Stocks in first hands continue to increase, while the available supply of home melt in excellent condition is still abundant, so that the market remains in a weak state with but little probability of an immediate recovery. Present quotations are about 1s to 2s per cwt. lower than those current at the date of our last circular, the finer qualities marking the heaviest decline. Beef, on the other hand, in consequence of the limited quantity offering, together with the prospects of a short supply, has sold fairly well at about previous rates. We quote:—F. Y. C. New, 50s per cwt.; Australian mutton, fine, 38s to 38s 6d per cwt.; ditto ditto, medium, 37s to 37s 6d per cwt.; ditto beef, fine, 37s to 38s per cwt.; ditto ditto, medium, 35s to 36s per cwt. The estimated stock in warehouse is 21,500 casks, of which 230 are Russian. Importations for the fortnight ended 17th instant amounted to 7960 casks. Leather, Hides, &c.—Leather: At the public auctions held on 16th instant 9931 sides were offered and sold at or immediately after the sales. There was a large attendance of buyers, and strong competition was elicited for most descriptions at rates fully equal to those recently quoted. The market closes firm with a hardening tendency. We quote fair to good sides, heavy, 12½ to 16½ lb., average 10d to 11½d per lb.; ditto ditto, light, 9½ to 11½ lb., average 10d to 11d per lb.; ditto ditto, extra heavy, 17½ to 21½ lb., average 10d to 11½d per lb.; ditto ditto seconds, 12½ to 16½ lb., average 9d to 10½d per lb. Importations for the fortnight ended 17th instant amounted to 1207 packages. Basils: These were in large supply at public auctions held on 16th instant, when 153,720 skins found purchasers out of a total of 176,038 brought forward. A fair general enquiry prevailed, and the various parcels catalogued were well competed for throughout. The better qualities sold readily at a distinct advance on previous quotations, while common and medium sorts fully maintained their positions. We quote—Best strained skins, averaging 9½ to 20½ lb. per dozen, 14½d to 18d per lb.; seconds, averaging 9 to 17½ lb. per dozen, 10d to 13½d per lb.; unstrained, averaging 10½ to 25 lb. per dozen, 8d to 12½d per lb. Next auctions will be held on 30th instant. Salted Hides: The sales at public auction on 15th instant amounted to 8148 hides out of 14,128 catalogued. There was only a moderate demand at about last sales' rates for the heavier averages, light weights and cow hides being ¼d to ½d per lb. lower. We quote: Sydney heavy ox, 5½d to 5¾d per lb.; ditto light ditto, 4½d to 4¾d per lb.; ditto seconds, 4d to 4½d per lb.; ditto cow, 4¼d to 4½d per lb. The present stock is 9800 hides, as against 17,419 on the 9th instant. Preserved Meats: The market has exhibited rather more firmness for all descriptions. Beef sells more freely at hardening rates, stocks in first hands being now comparatively light, and shipments afloat unimportant. The inquiry for mutton also is stronger, in sympathy to some extent with the improvement effected in the value of beef; but no change in quotations can as yet be recorded. We quote:—Boiled mutton, 2lb. tins, 5¼d to 5½d per lb.; ditto, 4lb. tins, 4½d to 5d per lb.; ditto, 6lb. tins, 4½d to 4¾d per lb. Boiled beef, 2lb. tins, 5¼d to 5½d per lb.; ditto, 4lb. tins, 4½d to 4¾d per lb; ditto, 6lb. tins, 4½d to 4¾d per lb. Importations during the fortnight ended 17th instant amounted to 9270 cases from Australia and 4908 from New York. Frozen Meats.—The depression prevailing at the date of our last circular has not yet passed away, the injurious effects of the recent pressure on the part of continental producers to realise their stocks being still felt in the general market, while that for frozen meats has been kept well supplied by the arrival of several sailing vessels in addition to the regular steamers. Home-fed sheep have also come forward in large numbers, while the receipts of American beef have been heavy, so that the supply of all classes has been considerably in excess of current requirements. A certain measure of success has already attended the efforts made to popularise frozen meats by means of the refrigerating apparatus, store, and grill-room at the International Health Exhibition, alluded to in our last circular. Considerable quantities of New Zealand and Australian mutton are consumed by visitors, and it is confidently anticipated that with an increased influx of these, consequent on the completion of the arrangements for the various exhibits which are still in process, a further increase in the daily supply will be found necessary. To-day's quotations are as follow:—Prime New Zealand mutton, 5s 6d to 5s 10d per stone of 8lb.; ditto ditto lamb, 5s to 6s ditto; ditto River Plate mutton, 3s to 3s 8d ditto.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 27th I notice a paragraph showing that in the last three decades there has been a very rapid increase of urban in comparison with rural population in this colony, and that in the 10 years from 1871 to 1881 the urban population became greater by 15 per cent. than the rural. This may be true, but I now write to point out that the statistics upon which you rely—the last census—are utterly unreliable. In my own immediate neighbourhood are two villages containing, when the census of 1881 was taken, respectively 25 and 32 inhabitants, and in the census both are returned as having over 100 inhabitants. I know for a fact that all over the country the same thing has occurred. The mistake arises partly from the loose way in which the census is taken, and the use of forms which do not make the place of residence clear. The post town is given by each householder in filling in the census paper, and in an immense number of cases people are put down as residents in villages when their actual place of residence is miles away. Statistics have been described as "the science of proving what you wish." The people who made up the census papers, after receiving them from the collectors, seem to have put down everyone whose place of residence was not known to them as resident in the post-town entered on the census paper, and the result is not only that the statistics are useless, but that they are infinitely worse than useless as they are misleading. The two villages to which I refer are Wingen and Murulla, in the county of Brisbane.

I am, &c.,

W. E. ABBOTT.

Wingen, June 28.

The Egyptian Government has announced that henceforth no contracts will be entered into with Europeans, giving them a right when their services are no longer required, to indemnities. The "indemnity trick" has been a favourite mode of spoiling the Egyptians. A certain Logoolin has managed to secure two indemnities of £1300 each in less than a year.

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; m, misty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n the corresponding minimum temperature. R'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained in the centre of it. At each coast station the wind symbol is placed like a vane pointing to the direction from which the wind is coming. A clear circle with it means fine weather, a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour; next, a symbol showing the state of the sea; and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Es, Eucla; CB, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Re, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; W P, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Ma, Moruya; G G, Jervis Bay; Wg, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; P M, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning in Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them and southerly following.

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.

SURE REMEDY AGAINST COUGH.

READ, Sufferers from Cough and Bronchitis, the following letter from the Rev. Horace Roberts, D.D.:—

"Dear Sir,—A few days ago I addressed a letter to you in commendation of your famous old cough remedy, and having since known its efficacy as superior to any other preparation, I consider it to be merely a public duty to certify, as the experience of my own family and friends, to the value of the Balsam of Aniseed as the cheapest and best remedy for coughs and colds.

"Yours faithfully,

"H. ROBERTS, Olney, Bucks.

"To Mr. Thos. Powell, Albion-place, Blackfriars-road, London."

"H.M. Gunboat Netley, Wick, Scotland.

"Dear Sir,—Having had a most distressing and severe cough, which caused me many sleepless nights and restless days, I was recommended by his Lordship the Earl of Caithness to your most 'invaluable' Balsam of Aniseed, and I can assure you with the first dose I found immediate relief, even without having to suspend my various duties, and the first small bottle completely cured me: therefore I have the greatest confidence in fully recommending it to the million.

(Signed) "W. LINKELL, H.M. Gunboat Netley."

THOSE WHO COUGH AT NIGHT WILL FIND IMMEDIATE RELIEF

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.—The following letter has been received by Mr. T. Powell from Wm. Boards, Esq., an agriculturist and land agent, residing at

"Nightingale-hall, Edmonton.

"Dear Sir,—I have recently suffered much from a most violent cough, proceeding from a tickling in my chest, which no remedy out of many I resorted to could allay. My head was constantly aching, and my whole frame was entirely shaken. Having seen the good effects of your Balsam of Aniseed in several members of my family, I purchased a small bottle, and when going to bed at night took a tea-spoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water just warm. The effect was immediate; it arrested the tickling in my chest; I slept well, and arose perfectly restored in the morning, with the exception of debility, arising from fatigue by incessant coughing for some days previous. My cough entirely left, and has never returned. Having since heard of a lady in the neighbourhood who for a long time had laboured under a most distressing cough, and who had resorted to every remedy within her knowledge, I sent the remainder of the bottle to her, and that long-standing, obstinate, and (as she thought) incurable cough was perfectly cured. For coughs, colds, shortness of breath, asthma, tickling in the throat, and all pulmonary affections, this medicine will be found invaluable.

"I am, dear Sir, yours very truly,

"WM. BOARDS.

"To Mr. Thomas Powell."

TRULY AN EXTRAORDINARY EXPECTORANT.

Mr. Thos. A. Sheridan, of Elphin, Ireland, writes:—"For three days and nights I was a stranger to rest and sleep; racked and almost killed with a hard cough. I tried all sorts of remedies, but to no purpose. At length a friend kindly supplied me with a quarter of a small bottle of your Balsam, and told me to try it, which I accordingly did. The result has been miraculous. The cough has almost ceased, and I have once more found out (thanks to your Balsam) what it is to enjoy sleep and life."

ITS EFFICACY IN CASES OF CONFIRMED ASTHMA IS PROVERBIAL.

THE OLD COUGH REMEDY.—The remedy "of rare and proved effect" for Coughs, Asthma, and Bronchitis—POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED. Sold by chemists. Trade mark, Lion, Net, and Mouse.

LOOSENS THE PHLEGM IMMEDIATELY.

The Dean of Westminster's Verger writes:—"I was advised to try the Balsam of Aniseed; I did, and have found very great relief. It is most comforting in allaying irritation and giving strength to the voice."

Lionel Brough, Esq., the eminent actor, writes:—"I think it an invaluable medicine for members of my profession, and have always recommended it to my brother and sister artistes."

"Chateau de Montabor, Aveyron, France.

The Duc de Montabor writes:—"From the first dose I felt great relief, the bad symptoms grew feebler, the irritation of the throat was calming down, and I recovered the sleep which had nearly left me."

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.

THE SOOTHING EFFECT of ONE TEASPOONFUL taken in a little water on going to bed is EXTRAORDINARY.

No family should be without it.

Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 12, 1866.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the best and most certain remedy in cough, colds, asthma, consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, &c.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is a certain cure for cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, colic, &c.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—Caution: None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Sole manufacturer, J. T. Davenport, 33, Great Russell-street, London. Sold in bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, and 11s. Agents, Sydney, ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

Call and Inspect, or send for Catalogue.

THIS SALE IS IMPERATIVE—First, because our stock has largely increased, and must be reduced; second, because it is our usual time for stocktaking and adjusting the year's accounts.

It is seldom that a stock so large and costly is submitted to such sweeping reductions; but as we have made it a rule to begin each season with a New and Fresh Supply, we place our present stock on the market. Our patrons will not fail to notice the special concession in prices made in the departments.

We would respectfully urge ladies to send for and read our Catalogue, which, though lengthy, will amply repay a study. Pleas mark any lines you would like to see, and ask for them. We guarantee to be able to show on our Opening Day every line mentioned on the Catalogue.

SPECIAL NOTE.—The Reduced Prices will be marked in RED INK, so that ladies may be able to compare present with former prices.

IMPORTANT.—The goods submitted are not old-fashioned or defective, neither are they goods bought specially to enable us to quote sensational prices, but are our usual good and superior qualities, such as our establishment is noted for.

TUCKER'S GRANT of 5½ acres, with Stone RESIDENCE overlooking the waters of Middle Harbour, a little off the MILITARY-ROAD, and just beyond the celebrated WATER-FALLS, being well known as SHELLBANK, the property of Mr. David M. Smith.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 18th July, at 11 o'clock,
All that corner original grant of 5½ acres, having HIGH-WATER frontage, bounded on the south-west by a chain wide road, to which there are 565 feet frontage; on the east by 528 feet; and on the north-east and north-west by high water, where the frontage is very considerable. On it is faithfully erected of stone, having slate roof, SHELLBANK, a two-storey residence, containing verandah, hall, 5 rooms, pantry, bathroom, kitchen, storeroom, and outbuildings. In the salt water are boat and bathing houses. The grounds are partly terraced, and variously improved. The addition of a wing in front would make the house very spacious, and not mar the pleasing effect of the present design.

This purchase from the Crown was one of the best in the district, and only an inspection will convey an adequate idea of the loveliness of the situation for variety of views of both water and landscapes. A reference to the map of parish of Willoughby will identify the grant, marked with "NATURAL WHARF" and "DEEP WATER," thus establishing it as an exceedingly valuable block. The route is from Milson's Point by omnibus, along Military-road, close to which it is situated, as also to the first-class properties of Messrs. Cooke, M'Pherson, and others. The tram is shortly to be started to North Shore Reserve, and doubtless soon after will run on to the fortifications by way of the well-kept Military-road, which affords some of the most charming scenery along one of the prettiest drives around Sydney.
